POPE PAUL NAMES 19 NEW CARDINALS

Archbishop of Washington Is Elevated—Two Secret Appointments Made

Special to The New York Times
ROME, April 27—The Vatican announced today the appointment of 19 new cardinals, including one American, Archbishop William Wakefield Baum of Washington.
The 19, who are due to be installed formally by Pope Paul VI, in a consistory on May 24, will raise the total membership of the Roman Catholic Church's Sacred College of Cardinals to from 117 to 136. Three of those named today are Italians, increasing their number to 36,
still the largest single group.
Americans are second with 12.
Two other prelates were also elevated to the rank of cardinal today but their names were not made public. In the past the Vatican has sometimes withheld the names of prelates appointed in Communist countries.
With today's selections, the College of Cardinals, which elects popes, will be younger and more international than before.
The youngest of today's appointees is the 47-year-old Archbishop of Manila, Jaime L.

Rockefeller Apologizes for Remark on 2 Jackson Aides

By RICHARD D. LYONS
WASHINGTON, April 27—Vice President Rockefeller formally apologized in the Senate today for engaging "in unsubstantiated speculation" that two members of the staff of Senator Henry M. Jackson had Communist ties.
Senator Jackson and leaders of both parties in the Senate immediately accepted the apology and said that the matter was closed, thus heading off what might have led to a formal investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Vice President's remarks.
The chamber was crowded with senators but hushed as the former Governor of New York, speaking from his seat as President of the Senate, read his brief statement, which was an apology "to the Senate of the United States, to its members, and particularly to Senator Jackson."

Subject of Controversy
The 4,658-foot runway at the airport has been a subject of considerable controversy, ever since jets began taking over from piston planes on runs to St. Thomas, the island on which Charlotte Amalie is situated.
Pilot groups and some airline officials, have considered it not so safe as it should be even though it meets Federal Aviation Administration criteria.
Their criticism has been based not only on the comparatively short runway length, but also on the menacing presence of two hills off the eastern end toward which most landings are made.

Weather No Factor
Weather was not a factor in

was the first fatal crash in over

Breakthrough for Carter He Wins a Necessary Industrial State, But Humphrey Shadow Is Lengthening

By R. W. APPLE JR.
PHILADELPHIA, April 27—
Jimmy Carter's decisive victory in the Pennsylvania primary today established him, at least for the moment, as the most likely Democratic nominee for President. Although the results of the separate delegate races were still unclear, the Georgian's success in the preferential vote gave him the breakthrough in an industrial state he had sorely needed.
But even in his latest hour of glory, the ominous shadow of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota fell across Mr.
Carter's path to the nomination.

Drug Convictions Upheld Even if Police Set Up Sale

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, April 27—
The Supreme Court ruled today, 5 to 3, that it is constitutional to convict a person for selling contraband such as drugs even when undercover agents or government informers initially supplied the seller with the drugs and other undercover agents were the purchasers.
Three of the Justices in the five-man majority said that es-long as a defendant was "predisposed" to make an illegal sale, no amount of government
"misconduct" or involvement in the crime may bar the defendant's conviction.
The two other Justices in the majority took a less absolute view. They said, however, that where the defendant was "predisposed" to commit a crime,
"police overinvolvement" in the crime would have to reach a demonstrable level of outrageousness before it could bar conviction.
They also said that cases in which police "overinvolvement" would be sufficiently "outrageous" to bar a conviction would be "rare" if in fact there would be any at all.
The ruling substantially strengthens the power of law enforcement, particularly in the narcotics area, where use of undercover agents and informers is the major law enforcement tool. In effect, the ruling broadens the extent to which the police may participate in planning an illegal crime in an effort to make an arrest or build a conviction.
The Court's ruling affirms the previous ruling in the case, in-

Panel Trims Intelligence Oversight Plan

By LESLIE H. GELB
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, April 27—
The key proposal of the Senate
Select Committee on Intelligence Activities to establish a new intelligence oversight committee with broad legislative and budgetary powers was watered down by the Senate Rules Committee today.
The proposal is expected to be defeated entirely tomorrow by the Rules Committee, thus setting the stage for a major battle on the Senate floor next week.
Supporters of the proposed intelligence oversight committee do not believe that they stand much of a chance in the Rules Committee but intend to press the issue on the Senate floor, where they calculate their chances of success are better but still uncertain.
The Rules Committee approved today by a 5-to-4 vote a move that would require the proposed oversight committee to share its jurisdiction with the four committees that now have authority over intelligence operations.
This would entail overlapping jurisdictions with the Senate committees on Armed Services, Appropriations, Foreign Relations, and Judiciary—the very committees that critics say failed to exercise their oversight responsibilities in the past.
A second section of the select committee's report, dealing with domestic intelligence activities to be released tomorrow. The first section, containing the recommendation for a new oversight committee, was released yesterday.

Portuguese Parties Start Drives to Form a Cabinet

By MARVINE HOWE
Special to The New York Times

LISBON, April 27—Portugal's political leaders opened rival campaigns today for the formation of a future civilian government in the wake of Sunday's inconclusive parliamentary elections.

There was a threat by the liberal Popular Democratic Party to bring down the existing lame-duck government, which is due to remain in office until a new President is elected late in June.

The Socialist Party, which won a plurality in the election, insisted that it would honor its campaign pledge to form a minority government without making an alliance with either the Communists or the parties to the right.

But there were strong pressures for a coalition government from the Communist Party as well as from the Popular Democratic Party and the conservative Social Democratic Center.

Final results, excluding the overseas vote, were announced tonight and showed no clear-cut majority. The Socialists, with 34.97 percent of the vote, announced that they were prepared to govern alone, counting on the tacit support or abstention of one or another of the other parliamentary groups.

Three Runners-Up

The runners-up were the Popular Democratic Party, with 24.03 percent of the vote; the Social Democratic Center, with 15.91 percent; and the Communist Party, with 14.56 percent.

Francisco Sá Carneiro, leader of the Popular Democrats, declared that the results of the election showed the need for a coalition government. He threatened to take his party out of the present provisional government if the Socialists insisted on forming a minority government.

"The gravity of our current economic, financial and social problems calls for a government with a broad base of support," Mr. Sá Carneiro said at a news conference. He said the party's Executive Committee would meet today to decide whether to remain in the government.

The leader of the Social Democratic Center, Diogo Freitas do Amaral, also insisted on the need for broad coalition of the three main parties "at this time of very grave economic crisis."

Without any threats, the conservative leader expressed the hope that the Socialist Party would revise its no-alliances position "in view of the national emergency."

Communists for Coalition

The Communist Party, which had centered its campaign on the need for a majority of the left, also stepped up its pressure on the Socialists. A statement from the party's Political Committee called for the formation of "a government of the left as a natural consequence of the defeat of the right in these elections."

The Communists based their claims to "a victory of the left" on the fact that their combined vote, with the Socialists, gave the left 146 deputies compared with a total of 112 deputies for the Popular Democrats and the Social Democratic Center.

Also the Communist press stressed that the party was the only member of the government coalition to increase its votes and emphasized that the Socialists had lost votes in several Communist-dominated areas.

The Socialist leadership met today to study the election results but there was no indication that the party would alter its position on the alliance issue.

Navy Chief Is Looking to Full Role in NATO

By SA LEWIS
New York Times

LISBON, April 27—The Navy said today that Portugal will be fully engaged in the Atlantic exercise aftermath of operations, which will include civilian government-organized exercises.

Souto Silva, chief of staff, said in an interview that the Navy had remained in the North Atlantic since two years ago, a "standstill" that was withheld units held in reserve.

Portugal was its turn came nuclear plan-ear. But in the there has been restrictions on n for Portugal.

A seven-ocean North Atlantic air-sea exercise called Open Gate began yesterday and will last until May 3. Portugal, the United States, Britain, West Germany, the Netherlands, Norway and Canada have units involved.

Exercise Long Planned Officials said it was initially planned two and a half years ago, before the 1974 revolution, and was to practice operations for keeping open the Strait of Gibraltar. It includes simulated bombing runs by Portuguese and American fighters, off the carrier America, on the Portuguese air force base of Alcochete near Lisbon.

It was Admiral Silva Cruz, described by a Western ambassador in Lisbon as "very moderate," whose comments provoked a warning two months ago from the North Atlantic commander, Gen. Alexander Haig. During a meeting of military experts in Munich, General Haig said the alliance could be "killed" from inside.

political and social developments as well as by hostile forces outside the alliance.

General Haig's statement against Communists in North-

Atlantic member governments raised widespread controversy, especially in France, where it was taken as clumsy intervention in internal politics.

The Portuguese navy chief said General Haig's remarks were "exaggerated out of their context," and that he and the alliance commander had simply given their points of view and disagreed.

The admiral called for "capitalism with a human face" and an understanding of the special needs of less developed societies in southern Europe, he said in the interview. His appeal was evidently intended as the counterpoint to the slogan of "socialism with a human face" used by Czechoslovak reformists under Alexander Dubcek.

"Capitalism is the best solution for the United States and the advanced industrial countries," he said. "It has given us the highest living standards, and if you haven't wiped out poverty, you have reduced it very much."

But, he said, in the southern countries such as Portugal it is not working that way.

"The rich get richer and the poor get poorer," he said. "For example, a big multinational company comes here and opens a huge factory, two or three thousand workers.

Does Nothing For Portugal "It makes two or three components for something. All the materials are imported, and all the products are exported. It goes nothing for Portugal, brings no technology, doesn't help to develop the country at all. It just takes advantage of cheap labor, which is understandable for the businessmen, but what about our people?"

"They look and say, if that is what the capitalist system means, then we should try something else. The other system is Communism," the admiral said.

"That is why we have to find some new ways, some changed version of capitalism for countries like ours, so it can work better to solve the problems while we are developing."

The admiral is a stubby, grizzled man, the very image of an old sea dog, although he wears civilian dress in his office. He said he had learned English in Hong Kong as a young midshipman. He speaks it colloquially with an American accent.

The chief of staff's office in the Naval Ministry is an imposing room overlooking the active port on the broad mouth of the Tagus River. Tapestries and paintings are of sailing ships from the days of Portugal's 15th and 16th century explorations of the seas around the globe.

block any military sale of over $25 million; to set up machinery to prohibit aid to countries violating human rights; to prevent transfers from one country to another; to limit total arms sales to $9 billion in a year; to block aid programs to countries that discriminate against Jews and others, and to phase out the military grant program and to close down military assistance missions.

The apparent decision by Mr. Ford to veto the aid bill came as a major surprise to Senator Robert H. Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota, whose subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee had gotten the bill through and ready for final action. He said that his committee would block any further legislation for the next fiscal year until the current authorization measure was approved.

A veto would have a major effect on the Middle East aid package, particularly on aid to Israel, which would be authorized to receive $2.2 billion for the fiscal year ending June 30. Until an authorization bill is passed, Israel can only receive money on the basis of last year's $600 million aid bill.

A compromise on that question, allowing Israel $375 million in military loans, is under consideration.

According to the Senate Republican leader, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Mr. Ford believes that the authorization bill amounts to "a Congressional invasion" of the executive branch's authority.

He said that "there is a good chance" Mr. Ford will veto the bill.

"One of the points he made was that he is definitely considering vetoing it and he was asking for a reaction," said William S. Broomfield of Michigan, the ranking Republican on the House International Relations Committee.

Mr. Ford gave a long list of his grievances to the participants. The list cited the following objectionable features in the bill: the right of Congress by concurrent resolution to

Communists in Italy: Europe Debates the Warnings of Kiss

By ALVIN SEUSTER
Special to The New York Times
ROME, April 22—Italians in all political parties, diplomats and others here have now had time to assess the implications of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's tough words on the possible role of Communists in Italy's Government.

The consensus emerging is that the secretary's warnings are cutting two ways, with some damage to both the Communist Party and the beleaguered Christian Democrats. The feeling among many here is that as a result the threats from Mr. Kissinger to "re-assess" relations if the Communists share power should have little impact on the outcome of the forthcoming elections.

For the Communists, Mr. Kissinger's remarks are unwelcome because they stir fears among Italians who worry about strains between Washington and Rome and who are seriously concerned that a vote for the Communist Party would be a vote for trouble with the United States. "The remarks could hurt us in the long run," said a senior Communist official, "but underneath Mr. Kissinger is really trying to freeze a situation which is no longer tenable. The untenable situation is, of course, the present political and monetary crisis, featuring a sinking lira and a Christian Democratic Government on the verge of collapse, badly shaken by the latest revelations of Lockheed payments to Italian officials. National elections now appear to be certain for this June, a year ahead of schedule, and the Communists could well overtake the Christian Democrats and emerge as Italy's largest party."

Though Mr. Kissinger is hoping that the Christian Democrats will pull themselves together before the vote, his remarks seem to be generating some unease within their ranks. As several of them have noted, the Christian Democrats, who have long opposed the "historic compromise" that would yield cabinet seats to the Communists, now appear to be listening to new orders from Washington. "We don't want the United States to throw up its hands and say Italy is hopeless so the Communists can have it," a Christian Democrat said, "but I'm not sure all those strong expressions help us either. Most Italians know where the United States stands."

Whatever the domestic political impact of Mr. Kissinger's forceful comments, there remains the debate over the more general international questions he raised—Italy's relationship with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the expected fallout elsewhere in Europe from any decision to hand over some power to the Communists. Where does Mr. Kissinger appear to be right, and where wrong?

These were among the questions explored this weekend at a meeting of the independent Italian Institute for International Affairs, which sponsored two days of talks about the future of the country and invited Communists, Christian Democrats, businessmen, bankers and analysts from West Germany and Britain. And a group of American members of congress left Rome today after discussing similar issues with a variety of Italians.

"Kissinger is right when he talks about the possible changes in NATO if the Communists come to power," a British participant in the Italian Institute talks said. "He is probably right in reminding the Italians that there will be a problem. And he is reflecting something that Germans and the British feel as well. The Italians with Communists in government will be outsiders. The sensitive matters will be handled without the Italians, by a smaller group, namely the Americans and Germans," he said.

"Where Kissinger is wrong is in saying Communists in government here would be unacceptable, primarily because if it happens he is going to have to accept it." And he is stirring American public opinion to the point that when the Communists do come into the cabinet, the Americans will want to re-examine such questions as American troops in Europe. It has all the makings of a self-fulfilling prophecy."

In any event, there has also been some debate here about Mr. Kissinger's "domino theory" for Europe—that if one country opened its cabinet to Communists, others in Western Europe would be tempted to follow. The West German view expressed here is that a Communist victory in Italy would have just the opposite effect there—that the right in West Germany would clearly score some points and improve its chances of toppling the present Government in elections this October.

The French view, however, is somewhat different. Indications here are that much French reaction would depend on how the Italian Communists behaved. If they kept to their pledges, then the Socialists and the Communists in France might well do better in elections there in 1978. If the Communists here "act badly," as one analyst said, then the left in France would suffer a setback.

the Communists have escaped the present debate without some questioning. Karl Kaiser, director of the Society for Research on Foreign Politics in Bonn told the weekend conference that most observers of Italy were aware of the Communist Party's pledges to remain in the Atlantic Alliance, to avoid demanding the Defense Ministry and to maintain agreements on bases in Italy.

"The alliance, however, is an alliance against Communist states," he said. "Yet we would have one Government with cabinet ministers linked to a country—the Soviet Union—which is the main reason for the alliance. One has to question whether those Communists would be loyal to the other side. The solidarity of the Italian party with the Soviet Union obviously plays a role in all our perceptions. What would be the attitude toward the Soviet Union if there is a conflict?"

Sergio Segre, the head of the foreign section of the Communist Party, and one of its economic advisers, said that the party's acceptance of the party's suggestions that it were misplace

Top Leaders Said to Gain Victories in Vietnam's Vote

BANGKOK, Thailand, April 27 (AP)—North and South Vietnam announced today that their top Communist leaders had gained major victories in the general election Sunday for a joint National Assembly.

The results came as no surprise since there were no opposition candidates running in the election and even the official Vietnamese press had predicted certain victories for the leaders.

A Hanoi radio broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, said that "leaders of the Lao Dong (Communist) party and the Government have all received the highest ratio of votes" in the elections for the 492-member assembly, but it gave no names.

A Saigon broadcast said preliminary tallies indicated that about 95 percent of the eligible voters had cast ballots in an election previously described as "festive and enthusiastic" by the official Vietnamese press and radio.

Papua For National Dress
PORT MORESBY, Papua, New Guinea, April 27 (Reuters)—Town dwellers are to be encouraged to discard their colonial style shorts, shoes and long socks and wear national dress to work at least once a week, Prime Minister Michael Somare said today. He himself has given up Western clothing for a Melesesian lap lap, a calf-length skirt, and sandals.

Calculated superiority.

Calculators have come a long way in a short time. They've gotten smaller on the outside. Bigger on the inside. More economical all around.

And since the beginning, Canon has been in the vanguard of the calculator revolution.

In 1954, we introduced the first 10-key system desk top calculator.

Then we brought out the world's first pocket-size printer.

And our distinctive new breed of CP series printing calculators combines all the advantages of advanced electronic calculator technology with the basic design format of the adding machine keyboard.

With products like these, Canon is making today's problems easier to solve.

In the process, we're making quite a name for ourselves.

IT SETS VOTE FOR PRESIDENT

Lebanon Plans Session Saturday In a Villa Seen Rival Forces

By M. MARKHAM
Lebanon, April 27—Lebanese Parliament will meet Saturday in a villa on the outskirts of Beirut between the Christian and Moslem sections of the capital to elect a new President Suleiman

Frangieh. Speaker of the parliament, the deputies should assemble at the villa at 10 a.m. to choose the country's president.

The villa is surrounded by the Lebanese Liberation Front, a group of people and goods from the eastern and western parts of the capital. The decision of the deputies will depend on the situation in this desecrated city which has been ravaged by a right-wing Christian militia and a loose alliance of Muslims, leftists and the alliance, headed by the Socialist Party, at the villa to hold the election, which it is expected to win, contrary to the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the citizens.

The decision was issued by the committee of the Socialist Party, which was linked to the military and the threat of violence.

It has been at odds for some time, but the committee had demanded Frangieh be re-elected May 2.

Shooting and sniping were relatively calm from mortar and snipers in the hilly areas of the capital as scattered sniping, a barrage of rockets crashed down on the completed Murrat Beirut.

Mr. Frangieh has several supporters and a force of men poised a few miles from the Lebanese territory.

Mr. Frangieh is favored by Mr. Sarkis as right-hand man of the late President Elias Sarkis, who ran Lebanon from 1958 to 1964.

An American Proponent of Ecumenism

William Wakefield Baum

When William Wakefield Baum was created a Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church in 1970, he chose as his motto a phrase inspired by Paul's words to the Christians in Corinth, "Ministerium reconciliationis." The motto reflected the new bishop's years of work in the "ministry of reconciliation," meaning the Church's ecumenical movement.

Elevated to the College of Cardinals by Pope Paul VI, the Archbishop of Washington invoked that ecumenism yesterday when he made the point of including Protestants and Jews in his prayer at yesterday's noon mass in the capital's St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Tall and bespectacled, the soft-spoken Archbishop, 49 years old, voiced his belief that his Church was entering "a golden age, a second spring," despite the talk of dropping membership and internal dissension. Archbishop Baum reiterated his support for the Pope's stand against birth control and for priestly celibacy, calling the latter a "valuable, precious and good" tradition. He was visibly moved when his parishioners applauded him at the end of his homily and filed out of the cathedral, many of them stopping to kiss his ring.

Came to Capital in '73

Though he began to make his mark in Washington nearly 10 years earlier with his ecumenical work, Archbishop Baum was appointed by the Pope just three years ago to head the Church in the District of Columbia and five Maryland counties. He succeeded Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, who had held office for 25 years and was retiring on reaching the age of 73.

Cardinal O'Boyle's vigorous leadership at times gave rise to controversy, nor was the relatively brief tenure of his mild-mannered successor without it.

Archbishop Baum, a native Texan, set out with a call

United Press International

Spent many years as a guiding spirit of the ecumenical movement of his church (Archbishop Baum before he celebrated mass yesterday at St. Matthew's in Washington) to "battle with racism and with all other forces which threaten human life and dignity." The following year he proposed to pay $525,000 for an official residence, a suggestion that did not sit well with spokesmen for that third of his flock who were black or of Hispanic origin and believed the money would be better spent on the parishes of the poor. The residence went unbought.

The Archbishop also was criticized by members of his Black Secretariat when he failed to grant them permission to locate its office in a black neighborhood.

As a Cardinal, Archbishop Baum will be no stranger to Rome, having studied there and attended meetings at the Vatican, including the World Synod of Bishops in 1971.

He was born in Dallas on Nov. 21, 1926. At the age of 10 he became an altar boy. Then he studied at Kendrick Seminary in St. Louis and was ordained a priest in 1951.

In between serving as associate pastor in various Missouri parishes, he studied at the University of St. Thomas Aquinas in Rome from 1956 to 1958, earning his doctorate in theology, and also taught for nine years at Avila College in Kansas City.

In 1964, he became executive director of the Bishops' Committee for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs, of which he was chairman at the time Paul VI called on him to become Archbishop of Washington in 1973. He had been consecrated Bishop of Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Mo., in 1970.

Archbishop Baum also is the author of "The Teaching of Cardinal Cajetan on the Sacrifice of the Mass" (1953,) and "Considerations Toward the Theology of the Presbyterate," published in 1961.

Chinese 'Radicals' Appear First Time Since Teng's Ouster

By FOX BUTTERFIELD
Special to The New York Times

HONG KONG, April 27—The leading members of what is known as China's radical faction, including Chairman Mao Tse-tung's wife, Chiang Ching, took part in a ceremony honoring the militia in Peking last night. It was their first appearance since the ouster of Teng Hsiao-ping, the former Deputy Prime Minister earlier this month.

The radicals' absence from public view since Mr. Teng's ouster, and the simultaneous promotion of Hua Kuo-feng to Prime Minister, had touched off speculation about their status. There had even been some reports that they might have been put under house arrest, 28.

to prevent a recurrence of the day-long rioting in Peking of April 5, which was meant to express support for the late Prime Minister, Chou En-lai, who died in January.

Mr. Chou was a leader of China's pragmatic, or "moderate," administrators. According to the official Chinese press agency, Hsinhua, among those who took part in the meeting last night were Mr. Hua, the new Prime Minister; Wang Hung-wen, the Shanghai activist, to his 40's, who is the No. 3 in the party hierarchy; Chang Chun-chiao, Deputy Prime Minister who is also from Shanghai and whom some analysts consider a member of the radical group; Miss Chiang, and Yao Wen-yuan, a leading polemicist from Shanghai.

Hsinhua reported that Chen Hsi-lien, the powerful commander of the Peking Military Region, joined the meeting in his first appearance since Feb. 28.

SWEDISH TAX AIDE ASSAILS BERGMAN

Special to The New York Times

STOCKHOLM, April 27—One of the tax officials criticized by Ingmar Bergman in his farewell letter to Sweden last week today issued a four-page rebuttal to the film director's charges.

In his letter, Mr. Bergman said he refused "to enter into any kind of horse-trading" with the tax authorities, called them "prestige-buoying poker players" and cynically thanked them for having made him "so furious that I was cured" of a nervous breakdown.

Tax Superintendent Bengt Kallen, one of the two officials named personally by Mr. Bergman, said in his angry reply that Mr. Bergman had "raged, sworn, threatened, thrown mud and cast suspicion on certain stipulated persons."

Mr. Kallen said that neither he nor his colleague, Hans Svensson, who was also mentioned by the film director, "have ever met Bergman personally or spoken with him on the phone."

Mr. Kallen said it was "deeply regrettable" that Mr. Bergman had fled from Sweden, but said he should not blame the Swedish tax authorities or tax regulations. "Regret, instead, that day in 1967 when you allowed yourself to be duped by poor advisers into starting your own Swiss company," he said.

True Tales of a Thousand and One Flowers

by Christian Dior

Once upon a time, in olden France, there lived a lovely lady in a chic chateau.
And this lady had such charms even the crabby ole King smiled when he saw her.

Therefore and ergo, one bright May morning, ole King sent his troubadour, Tex, with a message spelled out in diamonds on a scroll of gold.

"I have fallen toes over tea-kettle in love.
Should you consent to be my Queenie,
I shall commission the geniuses at the House of Dior to fashion for you a robe of a thousand May flowers.
And every dingaling peasant in my realm shall call you Madame Mille Fleurs." (Of course you know mille fleurs is French for a thousand flowers.)

But this lady was not only a terrific looker.
She was a cool chick as well.
This was her response to the King.

"Dear Crabby, I will never be your Queen.
My heart belongs to one of your peasants, poor but honest Guy Goldenrod.
I would rather wear his wedding band than a million mille fleurs robes."

Whereupon she fled to the forest and fell asleep under an apple tree.

Now when she awoke, she was clad in such blossomy beauty that the birds sang "How swell." For the kind designers at the House of Dior had laid on her a robe and gown of mille fleurs et une.
A thousand flowers plus one (for love).

Starting this day, every man in the realm of the U.S. of A. can reward his lady with just such stuff.
A thousand and one tiny French flowers printed on polyester and cotton so carefree her dainty hands will never need to touch a flat-iron.

Senate Panel Trims Intelligence Oversight Proposal

of Iowa, one of those guiding the legislation of the proposed oversight committee through the Rules Committee, said today that the sharing formula would "greatly weaken" the proposed panel.

The proposals in yesterday's select committee report are now running into opposition, as expected, from those who want to protect existing committee jurisdictions and those seeking to preserve Presidential flexibility in conducting intelligence operations.

Senator Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, a member of the select committee, said that the matter was far from being resolved. "I have a strong preference for a single-responsibility, exclusive jurisdiction oversight committee," he said. "I'm still hopeful that that will be the final result."

Proposals Under Review

The Rules Committee is considering a variety of proposals from the Senate Government Operations Committee, including provisions to establish a new Senate intelligence oversight committee with exclusive legislative and budgetary jurisdiction in intelligence matters. These provisions, as they were originally sent to the Rules Committee, were wholly consistent with the recommendations of the select committee.

The more than 600-page report issued by the select committee yesterday described what was called a history of inadequate oversight and control of the intelligence community by the executive branch and Congress and constituted an extensive brief for the creation of a new standing committee in the Senate.

Senator Howard W. Cannon, Nevada Democrat who is chairman of the Rules Committee, introduced today another amendment that would drop the idea for a new standing committee and simply establish an other select committee to further study intelligence activities. He plans to call up his proposed amendment in the Rules Committee tomorrow.

Mr. Clark said that this call for a new study "would totally repudiate" yesterday's report by the select committee headed by Senator Frank Church, Democrat of Idaho.

The panel proposed by Mr. Cannon would have no powers beyond further study and review, and its members would be drawn exclusively from the four existing committees concerned with intelligence matters.

The Cannon amendment is virtually certain to pass the Rules Committee, according to Senators and staff who have been following its proceedings.

They have five votes and we have four, and that's all there is to it at this point, but I think we'll have the votes on the Senate floor," one Senator said.

BEAME IS CRITICIZED ON SOCIAL SECURITY

WASHINGTON, April 27 (UPI)—Jerry Wurf, president of the State, County and Municipal Employees Union, charged today that Mayor Beame of New York City had overestimated by $100 million the amount of money the city could save by withdrawing its employees from Social Security.

Mr. Wurf told the House Ways and Means Committee that Mr. Beame's alleged saving was "illusory" and that the withdrawal of local government employees from Social Security would "imperil the entire system."

Mr. Wurf also said it was "inconsistent and unfair" for the Social Security Law to allow

The 5-to-4 lineup was displayed today in the amendment offered by Senator James B. Allen, Democrat of Alabama, which required that any new standing oversight committee share powers with existing ones.

Voting with Mr. Allen and Mr. Cannon were Robert C. Byrd, of West Virginia, Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania, the majority leader, and Robert P. Griffin, of Michigan, the minority whip.

Debate Late Next Week

Voting against the amendment were Senators Clark, Claiborne Pell, Democrat of Rhode Island, Harrison A. Williams Jr., Democrat of New Jersey, and Mark O. Hatfield, Republican of Oregon.

One Senator said there was a chance of bringing Mr. Byrd into this group tomorrow but added that this was doubtful. The final recommendations of the Rules Committee are scheduled to be debated on the Senate floor late next week.

low municipal governments to terminate Social Security coverage for their employees.

He urged that Social Security be made universal to cover all employees in both the public and private sector and that the payroll tax be reformed to exempt low-income workers from taxation and to remove the income limit on which the Social Security tax is levied.

Pardon for Kerner Urged

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 27 (AP)—The Illinois Senate passed without debate today a resolution urging President Ford to grant a pardon to Otto Kerner. The 67-year-old Democratic former Governor of Illinois was convicted in 1973 of bribery, mail fraud and conspiracy involving a rare-track stock scandal while he was in office.

Justices Say Indians May Fight State Taxes in Federal Courts

WASHINGTON, April 27—The Supreme Court upheld unanimously today the right of an Indian tribe to go to Federal court rather than to state court to challenge state taxes on Indians and Indian-owned property within a reservation.

The ruling came in a case in which the confederated Salish and Kootenai tribes of the Flatland Reservation in Montana challenged that state's personal property taxes, cigarette sales taxes and vendor licensing statute.

Ruling on the merits of the tribes' challenges, the Court held that Montana may not tax either personal property on the reservation or cigarette sales on the reservation by Indians or to Indians. It also held that the state may not impose a vendor licensing fee on an Indian conducting a cigarette business for the tribe on the reservation.

However, the Court upheld the state's power to tax cigarette sales on the reservation by Indians to non-Indians.

On each issue, the Court's ruling affirmed that of the lower Federal court that first considered the matter. The state had appealed the portions of the lower court's ruling striking down taxes; the tribe had appealed the portion upholding the other taxes.

Today's ruling, in Moe v. Salish & Kootenai Tribes, No. 74-1656, and Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Moe, No. 75-50, is the latest in a long series of Supreme Court decisions involving taxes on Indians and their property.

Generally, the Court has held that states do not have jurisdiction to impose taxes on Indians and Indian property within a federally established reservation unless the Federal Government has consented to such taxation. The Court's ruling on the merits of the challenges in today's case follows this pattern. The opinion, written by Justice William H. Rehnquist, cites several earlier decisions and especially a 1973 ruling barring state income taxes on income earned exclusively on a reservation.

The Court is currently considering a case involving a $147.95 tax on the trailer of a Minnesota Chippewa Indian that raises a more difficult issue: whether the 1953 Federal statute that gave six states criminal and civil jurisdiction over most of the reservations in their states also gave them the power to impose personal property taxes on Indians on tribal land on the reservation.

Today's case involved a jurisdictional question. A Federal law prohibits Federal District Courts from enforcing state taxes "where a plain, speedy and efficient remedy" is available in the state courts. However, this has been interpreted to allow exemptions for certain suits by the Federal Government.

Also, another Federal law gives Federal District Courts jurisdiction over civil suits brought by tribes under the Constitution, Federal or treaties.

The Court reasoned that since the United States could have brought the same challenges that the tribes did in today's case, the tribes were not barred from the Federal courts, either.

DECISION ON MISSILE NOT DUE UNTIL FALL

WASHINGTON, April 27 (Reuters)—The Ford Administration will not decide till September on production of 60 more Minuteman missiles even though it asked Congress yesterday to provide the necessary money, the Defense Department said today.

The White House yesterday requested $322 million more for the 60 Minuteman III multiple-warhead missiles because of the slow pace of the talks with the Soviet Union on nuclear-arms limitation.

The Defense Department spokesman, William I. Greener, said today no decision had yet been made to produce the extra missiles. The money request was submitted to Congress, he said, "so we could review the situation in late summer and retain the option to build the missiles at that time."

Mr. Greener said the Senate Armed Services Committee had sought the Pentagon's position on Minuteman production money for the 1977 financial year starting in October so it could act on a Minuteman missile request for the present 1976 year.

President Asks Congress To Stiffen Antidrug Laws

By PHILIP SHARCOFF
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 27—President Ford, calling growing drug abuse "a clear and present threat to the health and future of our nation," asked Congress today to enact an "aggressive" new program to combat narcotics, including minimum mandatory sentences for traffickers.

In a message to Congress, the President said that the nation "had not won the war on drugs" and that, in fact, previous gains in reducing the abuse of narcotics were now being lost.

"In human terms," Mr. Ford declared, drug abuse has become "a national tragedy."

The President asked Congress to give its first attention to stronger action against the criminal drug trafficker. "These merchants of death who profit from the misery and suffering of others deserve the full measure of national retribution," he said.

Mandatory Sentences
Asserting that most convicted traffickers in heroin and similar drugs were receiving short sentences or no sentences at all, he asked Congress to legislate sentences of at least three years for a first offense, six years for a second offense and six years for selling to a minor.

Mr. Ford said that the purpose of this proposal is not to impose vindictive punishment but to protect society from those who prey upon it and to deter others who might be tempted to sell drugs.

The following are other measures Mr. Ford asked Congress to adopt to curb drug abuse:

Enabling judges to deny bail for defendants arrested for drug trafficking if the defendants have previously been convicted of a drug felony, or if they are on parole, are nonresident aliens, are fugitives or were arrested while in possession of a false passport.

Changing provisions of the law to allow the seizure of boats, aircraft, other vehicles and property used to smuggle drugs up to a value of $10,000. The current ceiling for the value of such seizures is $2,500.

Enacting a law requiring the forfeiture of cash or other personal property found in the possession of a narcotics violator when there is evidence the cash was intended for use in connection with an illegal drug transaction.

Giving the Government authority to prevent profits made from the illegal sale of drugs from being smuggled out of country.

Requiring masters of small privately owned boats to report to the United States Customs sources to reverse the trend.

Service immediately upon arriving in the United States rather than within 24 hours as now required. The 24 hours "give ample time to unload contraband," Mr. Ford said.

Approving the treaty for the international control of synthetic drugs.

The President also said he would take a series of executive actions to fight the illegal sale of drugs. He announced that he was establishing today two new Cabinet committees.

One committee would deal with law enforcement and the other would be concerned with drug abuse prevention, treatment and rehabilitation.

Mr. Ford also said he would direct the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to develop a tax-enforcement program aimed at high-level drug traffickers, saying "we know that many of the biggest drug dealers do not pay taxes on the enormous profits they make on this criminal activity."

Commenting that "many countries see drug abuse as primarily an American problem and are unaware of the extent to which the problem is truly global in scope," the President promised to intensify diplomatic efforts to enlist the widest possible commitments from other countries to cooperate in attacking the problem.

"Fight the Scourge"
"All of this will be of little use, however, unless the American people rally and fight the scourge of drug abuse within their own communities and their own families," the President said.

"We cannot provide all the answers to young people in search of themselves, but we can provide a loving and caring environment where we can provide good counsel, and we can provide good communities in which to live."

In 1973, President Nixon and others in his Administration asserted that the nation had "turned the corner" on the drug problem. But Mr. Ford's message today indicates that the problem is worse than ever.

He pointed out that more than 5,000 Americans a year die from the improper use of drugs and that perhaps half of all "street crimes" are drug-related.

"In simple dollar terms, drug abuse costs us up to $17 billion a year," the President said.

When signing his message to Congress, Mr. Ford said, "Now that the problem is worsening, we must not shrink from this challenge but rather redouble our efforts at all levels to provide the leadership and resources to reverse the trend."

Long Opposes Outlawing Tax Shelters

By EILEEN SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON, April 27—

Senator Russell B. Long, Democrat of Louisiana, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, made clear today his opposition to legislation that would outlaw the devices whereby high-income individuals reduce their Federal income taxes by making investments that, on paper, at least, lose money.

Legislation dealing with such "tax-shelter" investments was passed by the House last year and the Senate committee began formal consideration of that bill today.

Senator Long, in addition to voicing opposition to eliminating tax shelters, also stood his ground against an attempt by key Democratic senators to reach agreement with him on a timetable that would put a tax bill on President Ford's desk by July 1.

The antirecession tax cuts that were put into effect last spring expire June 30 and there is general agreement that they ought to be extended in one form or another.

Mr. Long would not commit himself, however, to finish work on revisions in the tax law in time to include them in the same bill as extensions of the tax cut.

Timetable Eyed.

At a closed meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, a number of senators said that they felt that Mr. Long had agreed to get the bill out of his committee by June 1 so that Congressional action could be completed by July 1. But the most that he would say after the meeting was: "That's what I'll be trying to do. I don't regard it as a firm commitment."

of the time at his committee's half-day operating session on the tax bill.

His voice repeatedly rising to a shout, he argued that high tax rates justified the efforts made by many wealthy individuals to reduce their Federal income taxes through investments in tax shelters.

He also argued that eliminating the use of tax-shelter investments in real estate would reduce the number of jobs available for construction workers by 24,000.

The latter argument was countered in committee by Senator William D. Hathaway, Democrat of Maine, who said that investments were supposed to be made "because they're productive, not because there are tax advantages." "According to your reasoning," he continued, "we couldn't do anything about any tax loophole."

The argument about a potential loss of jobs if certain types of investments lost their special tax benefits was also countered, in the Democratic Policy Committee meeting, by Arthur M. Okun, who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Johnson.

Mr. Okun was brought into the meeting at the request of Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, who has become the leader of the tax-reform forces in the Senate.

Mr. Okun said that if Government policies to create more jobs were needed, there were much more effective ways of creating those jobs than by maintaining tax loopholes that benefited investors in certain types of business, such as real estate.

"There's no doubt that you could create some jobs by just throwing $2 billion in cash out of a window because people will pick it up and spend it and that will create some jobs. But I doubt that anyone would argue that that would be the best way to create jobs," Mr. Okun was reported to have said.

JERSEY BELL CUTS RATE RISE REQUEST

NEWARK, April 27 (AP)—The New Jersey Bell Telephone Company says it will trim an additional total of $4.4 million from its initial rate increase request of $174.6 million.

A spokesman for the company confirmed that the utility would ask the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners for $150.2 million instead of the higher figure.

It is the second reduction of Bell's rate rise request. The company had previously announced it would reduce its request from the $174.6 million. Senator Long took up most to $154.6 million.

The company spokesman said two-thirds of the total reduction had been promoted by revised figures on expenses the utility incurred in the year ending June 30. The remaining reduction was caused by "higher than anticipated revenues" in this fiscal year, he said.

Bell announced the initial reduction of $20 million in its rate rise request last month following a demand by Joel R. Jacobsohn, president of the P.U.C., that it trim its request. It was the first time the phone company had ever lowered a rate rise request and also the first time any utility in the state had taken such a step as the result of pressure from a regulatory agency.

CONVENTION SEAT TO MISS KRUPSAC

Lieutenant Governor Added to Democratic Delegation

By FRANK LYNN
Lieut. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak has been quietly added to the New York delegation to the Democratic National Convention in an effort to quell a growing controversy over the asserted underrepresentation of women on the delegation.

The Lieutenant Governor, the highest-ranking woman officeholder in the state, was added to the delegation by the Democratic state chairman, Patrick J. Cunningham, moments before midnight Monday after a frantic telephone call from Miss Krupsak, who had been contacted by state committee officials seeking approval of the change.

However, a spokesman for Miss Krupsak, echoing other Democratic women leaders, said the Lieutenant Governor was still "disappointed" with the composition of the delegation.

Comment by Counsel
Robert Dryfoos, counsel to the Lieutenant Governor, said her appointment as a delegate "did not rectify the underrepresentation of women, Hispanics and youths" in the delegation.

Barbara Fife, chairman of the New Democratic Coalition caucus within the Democratic State Committee, and Louise Sunshine, the former state committee treasurer and a close ally of Mr. Cunningham's, used almost identical language in describing the "outrageous lack" of women, persons of Hispanic origin and young people on the delegation.

The controversy is centered on the 16 uncommitted delegates at large, who are divided among 14 men and two women. The remaining delegates at large, who were appointed to the Presidential candidates on the basis of their showing in the April 6 Presidential primary, were divided almost evenly, 27 men and 25 women.

Responsible for Appointment
Representatives of the various candidates were largely responsible for the appointment of the delegates at large committed to their respective candidates. Mr. Cunningham and four other county leaders—Joseph F. Crangle of Buffalo, Meade H. Esposito of Brooklyn, Borough President Donald R. Manes of Queens and Dominic Baranello of Suffolk County—were largely responsible for the appointment of the uncommitted delegates at large.

The naming of delegates at large is designed to provide delegate posts for the party hierarchy and to redress any imbalance among the 206 district delegates who were elected in the primary. The 206 include 73 women.

Thus, the 274-member delegation includes 100 women, or 37 percent; 13 Puerto Ricans, or 5 percent, and apparently only nine delegates under 30 years of age, or 3 percent. There are 26 black delegates, or slightly under 10 percent.

National Democratic Party rules call for "affirmative action" by the state parties to include women and minorities in the delegation, but the rules stop short of the virtual quota system that was used four years ago.

Mr. Cunningham defended the representation of women in the at-large delegation, noting that most of the "party hi-

A Bicentennial Spruce: Red, White and Blue

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Three varieties of spruce trees are native to different parts of America: the red, the white and the blue.

A Michigan State University forestry professor, James Hanover, has cross-bred all three into a Bicentennial creation called the American spruce.

"We hope the American spruce will show the rapid growth of the red spruce, the disease resistance of the white spruce and the beautiful color of the blue spruce," Mr. Hanover said.

rarchy" is male. "It's not ideal, but it's not an offensive breakdown," he said.

However, the Lieutenant Governor, Mrs. Fife and Mrs. Sunshine disagreed. It was Mrs. Sunshine who paved the way for Miss Krupsak's appointment by declining as an alternate delegate so that Miss Krupsak could replace her and then be in position to replace Marion McDonough, the wife of an upstate county leader who had originally been named an uncommitted delegate at large but declined under pressure from party leaders. Mrs. McDonough's husband, Edward, holds a top patronage post on the staff of Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut, Democrat of Brooklyn.

Whether the unhappiness over the representation of women will result in a challenge of the delegation was still not clear yesterday. Some challenges on other grounds are already scheduled to be heard by a hearing officer appointed by the chairman of the national convention-credentials committee, Senator Alan Cranston, Democrat of California.

112,000 NEGATIVES SHOW U.S. HISTORY

Ray Falconer has shifted through aging barns, old studios or weatherbeaten ranch houses over the years and now has a collection of about 112,000 negatives depicting a lot of this nation's history.

Three of his negatives are originals of Mathew B. Brady, the famous Civil War photographer. Many are of the old 101 Ranch near Ponca City. Others run the gamut of rare films of Hopi Indians performing the Kachina and snake dances in Arizona and of the land runs in Oklahoma in 1889 and 1893.

Mr. Falconer's hobby is not exactly inexpensive.

"I've gotten many negatives without cost, but mostly I've had to squeeze purchases from my wages," he said. "My wife, Velma, has assisted me in long hours of finding, authenticating and sorting the film. It's going to be a job, isn't it, filing all this stuff?"

The collection has been estimated to have a value of $50,000, but Mr. Falconer has no desire to sell it.

The glass body negatives were found six years ago in an old barn "in the western part of Oklahoma," Mr. Falconer said. One is of Independence Hall, with Union Army tents, a wagon and a gathering of men at the entrance. Another is of President Lincoln and a third is of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant and some soldiers on Lookout Mountain. Brady's name is stamped on the Inde-

Congress Ignores Ford Vote Bill Plea

By WARREN WEAVER Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 27—President Ford challenged Congress today to agree on a short, simple bill reviving the Federal Election Commission that he could sign into law immediately, but the only response on Capitol Hill was negative.

Senate House conferees, ignoring the President's recommendation, plodded through a two-hour technical review of their long and controversial campaign bill. But they failed to complete the job and thus delayed Congressional action on the measure until next week.

In a midday statement, the President expressed considerable criticism of the bill before Congress but refused to say whether he would sign it if it arrived on his desk in its present language. Then he left for four days of campaigning in Louisiana and Texas.

Some Congressional authorities reasoned that if Mr. Ford planned a veto, he would have put the lawmakers on notice today, while they still theoretically had time to conform the legislation to his wishes, thus setting the stage for another attack on Congress if they refused.

Until the President and Congress can agree on a bill reconstituting the election commission, no campaign subsidies can be paid to Presidential candidates to help them finance their primary campaigns.

Mr. Ford has emerged as the best financed candidate in either party, and his refusal to commit himself to signing the campaign bill has been attacked by both Republicans and Democrats as a self-serving posture.

With the failure of the conferees to complete work on the bill this afternoon, it will probably not reach the House floor until next Monday, Representative Wayne L. Hays, chairman of the House conferees, predicted.

Sees Confusion

Earlier today, Democratic leaders of both houses said the conferees report would be given final approval by Thursday and sent to the White House. Now it appears that there will be another week's delay, at a minimum.

Even if Mr. Ford decides to sign the bill, it will probably take another week or more to reappoint the commission members, obtain Senate confirmation for them and hold a meeting of the reconstituted agency to unfreeze a backlog of $2.3 million in subsidies claimed by the candidates.

In his statement, the President charged that the bill before Congress "can only introduce added uncertainty in the law and thus create confusion for the candidates in the present campaigns and jeopardize the conduct of this year's Presidential election."

Besides reconstituting the commission to meet objections raised by the Supreme Court in January, the new bill subjects the agency to closer Congressional scrutiny, changes the rules under which union and corporate political action committees operate and limits the commission's investigatory power.

The conferees made no attempt at their meeting today to make anything but small technical changes in the legislation and the report that explains it.

When the conferees recessed until tomorrow afternoon, they still had more than 20 pages of the report to review. Mr. Hays said he did not see much difference between Congress passing the bill late this week or early next, a supporter of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, he has never expressed concern over the subsidy freeze.

1970, Mr. Goodell lost the seat to James L. Buckley, who ran on the Conservative Party ticket.

John D. Rockefeller 4th has been somewhat of a maverick in the Rockefeller family, becoming a Democrat partly because of the influence of Robert Keoedy.

In 1966, he ran for the West Virginia House of Delegates, as a Democrat, and won a two-year term. In 1968, he ran for Secretary of State and won. Then in 1972, he received the Democratic nomination for Governor, but lost to Arch A. Moore Jr., who was re-elected to a second term.

President of College. A year later he was offered the post of president of West Virginia Wesleyan College, a Methodist institution, and accepted. He remained there until deciding to once again run for Governor. Competing against him in the Democratic primary are a former State Supreme Court justice, James Sprouse, and Representative Ken Hechler. Political observers say he has an "excellent" chance to win the May 11 primary. If elected, he will face either former Gov. Cecil Underwood or Ralph Albertazzie, former pilot to former President Richard M. Nixon, on the Republican ticket. Under West Virginia law, Governor Moore cannot run for a third successive term. Yesterday, Mr. Rockefeller's press secretary said the candidate was campaigning around the state and would have nothing more to say on the statement, which he said was "a spur-of-the-moment thing."

Connecticut Senate Votes Bill to Curb Auto Pollution

HARTFORD, April 27 (AP)—A measure that would require auto-emissions inspections each year at a cost of as much as $10 a car was passed Tuesday by the State Senate and sent to the House of Representatives. The plan, designed to meet Federal clean-air requirements, would have to begin by 1979, but could begin a year earlier. Supporters said about 30 percent of the cars failed inspection in states with checks, but that about half of the costs to meet the requirements were less than $15. Cars would have to pass to be registered.

Iran Reports 3 Extremists Die in Teheran Gun Battle

TEHERAN, Iran, April 27 (Reuters)—Two men and two women, identified as members of an Islamic-Marxist extremist group, were killed in a street gun battle with security forces here last week, the Iranian Government reported today. A woman was killed and a man was wounded in the April 20 battle, the statement said. The male members of the group were identified as Jamal Sharifzadeh Shirazi and Mehdi Musayi-Qomi. The woman has not yet been identified, the statement said.

Rockefeller Apologizes for Comment

and Senator Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the majority whip, arose on the Senate floor to berate the Vice President over the incident. "There is no question it was a mistake," he said. "Obviously it was a mistake to have engaged in unsubstantiated speculation about two members of Senator Jackson's staff, even though I made no charges against anybody, and even though it was a private discussion. Therefore, I also apologize to them."

'The End of the Matter'

While Mr. Rockefeller did not name the two today, they have been reported to be Dr. Dorothy Fosdick and Richard N. Perle, both staff aides on the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the Senate Committee on Government Operations.

Neither Dr. Fosdick, daughter of the late Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who was minister at the Riverside Church in New York, which was built with the financial aid of the Rockefeller family, or Mr. Perle would comment on today's apology. "Senator Jackson spoke for all of us when he said 'that ends that,'" Mr. Perle said. Senator Jackson of Washington, a contender for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said after Mr. Rockefeller's statement, "I accept this apology on behalf of my staff. This is the end of the matter." The Senator said Dr. Fosdick was not present in the Senate chamber at the time of the Vice President's remarks.

Dr. Fosdick said in response to a question last Wednesday, "I have known Nelson Rockefeller for over 50 years. My father was his family's minister at Riverside Church in New York City. My father conducted the wedding service for Nelson and the funeral service for his father. I cannot imagine what motivated him to make these reported statements. I have no idea why Nelson would say this."

She also is the niece of Raymond Fosdick, a member of the board of trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation from 1921 to 1948 and president of the institution from 1936 to 1948. Last Wednesday The Atlanta Journal carried an account of Mr. Rockefeller's appearance before a group of businessmen the previous week in which the Vice President had been quoted as having said that Senator Jackson's staff had been infiltrated by a Communist.

The published account said there was disagreement among those who had been present over the exact nature of the Vice President's remarks, but that two of the 30 to 40 persons present had understood Mr. Rockefeller to have said that two of Senator Jackson's aides were Communists. The Atlanta account quoted a third source as having said that the Vice President merely speculated that the two had Communist connections.

Demands for Apology

After publication, Mr. Jackson demanded a retraction from Mr. Rockefeller, terming the remarks of the Vice President "McCarthyism revisited." Later the Vice President sent the Senators a telegram stating "I have made no charges, and therefore there are none to be withdrawn." The case continued to blossom through the weekend, with Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, the majority leader, echoing Senator Jackson's demand for an apology. Last Friday, The New York Times also reported that Mr. Rockefeller had made similar suggestions about Mr. Jackson's staff to an off-the-record meeting with reporters and editors of Time magazine last Jan. 12. Yesterday Senator Mansfield and Senator Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the majority whip, arose on the Senate floor to berate the Vice President over the incident.

"There is a smudge in the sky at the present time, and I think that smudge should be cleared away and the integrity of senators and the Senate and Congress should be re-established," Mr. Mansfield said.

There were widespread reports this morning that Senators Mansfield and Jackson were seeking in lieu of an apology from Mr. Rockefeller, a formal investigation by the Justice Department, using F.B.I. agents.

When asked about the matter at noon, Senator Mansfield said, "I have some thoughts in mind." He added that he would present them to a luncheon of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee. Word that Mr. Rockefeller had sought time to address the Senate an unusual step, appeared to have stopped action to mount a formal inquiry.

Today's apology was the second that the Vice President has made in the chamber to a member of the Senate. A year ago he apologized to Senator James B. Allen, Democrat of Alabama, for failing to recognize him, and thus allow him to speak during a filibuster being waged by conservatives against a proposed change in the Senate rules.

It was also the second time the Vice President had been involved in charges of Communist infiltration of Congressional staffs.

Senator Barry Goldwater, Republican of Arizona, said last year that Mr. Rockefeller had told him that seven "offices on the Hill had been infiltrated."

A subsequent investigation by the F.B.I. failed to substantiate the allegation.

ROCKEFELLER TEXT

I have read with great care the statements of the distinguished majority leader, the Senator from Montana, and the distinguished majority whip, the Senator from West Virginia, which appeared in yesterday's Congressional Record. I understand the point of view which they so eloquently set forth.

In the context of their remarks, I would like to apologize to the Senate of the United States, to its members, and particularly to Senator Jackson for my remarks in an off-the-record meeting. There is no question it was a mistake.

Obviously it was a mistake to have engaged in unsubstantiated speculation about two members of the Senator's staff, even though I made no charges against anybody, and even though it was a private discussion. Therefore, I also apologize to them.

Without addressing it in detail, frankly, what has been worrying me is that foreign governments are increasingly learning how to use our political system, and the openness of our society, for their own benefit, and too often to our detriment as a people and as a nation. This is a subject that concerns me very deeply.

In closing my remarks, I wish to emphasize that at no time did I ever intend to impugn the integrity of the United States Senate an institution for which I have the highest esteem and respect. I thank you.

All these states permit savings banks to offer checking or NOW accounts

Why not New York?

The U.S. Senate has passed the Financial Institutions Act of 1975 which will permit all federally-chartered thrift institutions to offer checking accounts.

It will also permit state-chartered savings banks to convert to a national charter.

While the general sentiment of New York State Mutual Savings Banks is to remain state-chartered, the competitive pressure for deposits may force Savings Banks to convert to national charters to gain the competitive tools so urgently needed.

Wouldn't it be wiser for the New York State Legislature to act now to help the Savings Banks by passing legislation now granting them the right to offer checking accounts?

The remark came shortly after he took credit for the strong tone of the country's economic recovery. "I believe in the 21 months I've been here, I have turned the economy around," he told 33 members of the Newspaper Farm Editors of America, which is holding its annual convention here. "Our policies at home and abroad are successful," he said. "We've turned this economy around. Everything that is supposed to be going up is going up, and everything that should be going down is going down." In other remarks in the discussion, which ranged far beyond agricultural issues, Mr. Ford asserted the following: "He is the 'underdog' in the Texas primary but hopes to surprise his opposition and expects to win both the nomination and the election."

He differs sharply with Ronald Reagan, his rival, on farm policy. Jimmy Carter, former Governor of Georgia, would be hard for his Democratic opponents to stop if he won today in Pennsylvania. The President also reiterated his intention to veto a grain-inspection reform bill if it came out of a Senate-House conference in a form similar to the version passed by the Senate yesterday. He indicated that he would accept something similar to the bill passed early this month by the House. The Senate bill provides for a new Federal agency to take over grain inspection from state and private agencies in all ports and in the 25 largest inland terminals. The House bill provides for Federal control in the ports but would retain the state and private system inland. In his remarks on farm policy, Mr. Ford said that his opponent in the primaries—he did not use Mr. Reagan's name—favored ending farm subsidies and had indicated he would withhold farm exports from some export markets "to achieve foreign policy objectives." "I would never use export of our agricultural commodities as a pawn in international relations," Mr. Ford said. He also said he had "no intention of withholding export sales" to affect the cost of living in the United States. Some farm groups have accused Mr. Ford of doing both last summer to the temporary embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union and the cutback on Soviet sales imposed in 1974.

Big Victory by Bentsen Called Vital to Re-election

By JAMES P. STERBA
Special to The New York Times
HOUSTON, April 27—Senator Lloyd M. Bentsen, seeking his second six-year term, is expected to win easily over his rivals in next Saturday's Democratic primary. But some supporters say he needs an overwhelming victory to forestall defections of supporters and contributors in November to Representative Alan Steelman, his likely Republican foe. Since ending his Presidential race on Feb. 10, the 65-year-old Senator has been running as a favorite son in the Presidential primary against Jimmy Carter and George C. Wallace. Simultaneously he is seeking renomination to the Senate, where his most serious rival in the Democratic primary is W. Philip Gramm, a 33-year-old conservative professor of economic at Texas A.&M. University.

34-year-old Republican moderate from Dallas, is forgoing a third term in the house to devote his full time to big campaign against Senator Bentsen. Considered something of a Republican golden boy, he has ignored his lesser-known Republican rivals for the nomination and is busbanding his forces and money for use against Mr. Bentsen in the fall. John B. Connally, the popular former Democratic Governor, was credited in 1970 with pushing Mr. Bentsen to victory over Mr. Bush. Mr. Connally, now a Republican, helped a political unknown gynecologist, Dr. Ron Paul, upset a liberal Democrat, Bob Gammage, in a race last month to fill the unexpired 22d Congressional District seat vacated by Democrat Bob Casey, who has been appointed to the Federal Maritime Commission. Republicans see their best chance in years to work the same magic in races this fall, especially in Mr. Steelman's challenge to Senator Bentsen. For the moment, Mr. Steelman has been slowly spreading his name, along with an image of solidity and reserve, around the state, saying in television commercials, "Let's end the abuse of big government, big labor, and big business." Hot Races for Congress There are three closely contested Congressional primaries in the state. One of them is for the Fifth District seat in Dallas that Representative Steelman is vacating.

There, Wes Wise, the former Dallas Mayor and a maverick conservative, is vying with Jim Mattox, a liberal State Representative, for the Democratic nomination. Nancy Judy, a conservative Dallas school board member, is unopposed on the Republican side. The hottest Congressional contest is in the 18th District in El Paso, where the incumbent, Richard C. White, is seen as vulnerable in his primary race against a liberal, George McAlmon. The winner will face Vic Shackelford, a conservative Republican businessman in the fall. Ten Democrats and two Republicans are vying for the First District seat, held for 48 years by the late Wright Patman, a Democrat.

Sorcery From an Oven in Bensonhurst: Challah at Its Best

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We know a man of unimpeachable taste, a distinguished figure in medicine, who exercises restraint in his spoken enthusiasms. But when he speaks of Sarah Schecht's challah, he rhapsodizes with vigor.

"Her challah," he said, "has a texture to rival that of the finest spongecakes. It is airborne, light as a zephyr, delicate as a feather." The last time she dispatched a challah to his home he wrote, "My dear Sarah, you are a better cook than I am a doctor."

We arranged to meet Mrs.

Schecht in her kitchen in Brooklyn's Bensonhurst section to discover, if we might, the secret of her sorcery in making the braided, yeast-leavened egg bread traditionally served by Jews for special and ceremonial occasions or simply for the sheer pleasure of dining.

Mrs. Schecht, who is 73 years old, and came to the United States from Poland more than half a century ago, told us that she knew no secret in her baking technique.

"The dish just turns out that way," she said, but she agreed to let us watch her make the bread and she started about 10:30 in the morning under the watchful, admiring eye of her husband, Al, who was born in Russia and is also 73 years old.

"We've been married 52 years," she told us proudly, "and we have four children and seven grandchildren."

Mr. Schecht, now retired, told us that his wife had never cooked before they were married, and she gave him an imphish look.

"That's not true," she declared, "I learned from the wife of one of my cousins."

Mr. Schecht, however, has fairly good credentials in food preparation.

His father was a baker

In Russia, and "I worked for years for Max's Stage Delicatessen on Seventh Avenue back in the days of the big band era, and I worked parties for some of the biggest actors and actresses in America," he said. "I catered the first party for Frank Sinatra. It was backstage after he opened at the Paramount Theater. I catered parties for the Marx Brothers at the old Ruyig and at the Capital for Xavier Cugat. Back in those days we fed them all."

Sits and Kibitzes

Mrs. Schecht had several dishes on the stove that morning—family-style sweet and sour stuffed cabbage and kneplach as well as the braided loaf. The couple cook together, often with a minor skirmish here and there as things progress.

"When he starts dirtying the dishes, I have to get him out of the way," Mrs. Schecht said. Getting out of the way generally means sitting in a chair at kibitzing distance.

As for the challah:

"You start with six cups of flour," Mrs. Schecht said as she emptied the flour into a large mixing bowl. "You add a couple of packages of yeast and a cup of lukewarm water and stir with a fork."

She stirred with a fork incorporating only about a quarter of the flour into the yeast mixture. She placed the bowl, uncovered, on a warm spot on the back of the stove and left it uncovered with the fork still in.

Why do you leave the fork in? we asked.

"Take it out, leave it in, what's the difference? You have to stir it later anyway after the yeast starts working." Good logic.

Levels Off Scoop

As the yeast worked, Mr. Schecht busied himself with measuring out the meat for the cabbage with an ice cream scoop, leveling off as he went about his work.

"For each cabbage roll you need two ounces of meat," he said. "Each leveled-off scoop weighs two ounces. For the cabbage use skirt steak, which I buy at a kosher butcher. Kosher meat is more expensive than other meat."

When the yeast had worked, Mrs. Schecht used the fork to incorporate the rest of the flour. Then she turned it out on a board and kneaded it. She is a diminutive woman, the mere wisp of a figure, but her appearance belies the strength of her fingers, apparent as she kneads the dough.

The cooking liquid was made ready for the cabbage, tomato sauce, and dried fruits; the parboiled cabbage leaves were stuffed, slowered with toothpicks, and to the kettle, challah dough was again. Kneplach, the table Jewish version, were made with cooked meat and onions, and the challah one more kneading on its final proofing.

The dough was eight equal portions rolled with open palm eight "ropes." The gathered at the pinched together a the ropes were-bred rope to right, right left and so on until styled trees, spheres bottom end pinched was formed.

It was transform large, rectangular loaves and left to rise on After an hour or so ed loaf had swollen its size and filled it was brushed a sprinkled with pop and plumped up. Oh, how it smelled same golden and just like the notes

Sarah Schecht braids the "ropes" in making a challah.

The New York Times/Alfred Weaver

8 1/2 to 9 cups sifted, unbleached flour plus additional flour for kneading

2 packages dry yeast

2 cups lukewarm water

1 teaspoon baking powder

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon vanilla

4 large eggs

1/2 cup corn oil (see note)

1/2 cup plus 1/4 teaspoon sugar

1 tablespoon poppy seeds or sesame seeds

1. Place six cups of the flour in a large mixing bowl and make a well in the center. Blend the yeast with one cup of the water and stir to dissolve. Add this to the well in the flour. Using a fork, start stirring around the well, gradually incorporating one-quarter of the flour—no more—into the yeast mixture. When approximately that amount of flour is blended into the yeast mixture, stop stirring. There is no need to remove the fork. It will be used for further stirring. Set the bowl in a warm, not too hot place, and let stand about 45 or 50 minutes.

2. Sprinkle the baking powder, cinnamon and salt over all. Add the vanilla, three of the eggs, the oil and three-quarters cup of sugar. Add the remaining water and beat again, first using the fork and then the hands. Add two cups of flour, kneading and, if the mixture is still too sticky, add an additional cup of flour.

3. Work the mixture well with a wooden spoon to make a very stiff dough. If necessary, add more flour. Work with the hands about 10 minutes. When the dough doesn't stick to the hands, it is ready. Shape the mixture into a rather coarse ball and cover. Let stand about 20 minutes and turn it out onto a lightly floured board. Knead well, adding a little more flour to the board as

5. Take one piece of dough at a time and place it on a flat surface, rolling briskly with the hands to make a "rope" about 12 to 15 inches in length. Continue until all the balls are shaped. The ropes are shaped vertically side by side and touching. Start working at the top of the ropes. Gather the tops of the ropes together, one at a time, pinching down to seal well. Separate the ropes down the center, four ropes to a side. Braid the ropes as follows: Bring the extreme outer right rope over toward the center next to the inside rope on the left. Bring the extreme outer left rope over toward the center next to the inside rope on the right. Continue with this procedure, left to right (this is arbitrary, it could be right to left), until the loaf is braided and each rope has been brought to the center. As the last ropes are brought over, it will be necessary to pull and stretch them a bit to get them to fit.

7. When the braiding is finished, gather the bottom ends of the ropes together and pinch them together just as you did at the top.

8. Meanwhile, generously oil (or butter) the bottom and sides of a rectangular baking pan measuring about 15 1/2 by 10 1/2 by 2 1/2 inches. Carefully gather up the braided loaf, using the hands and arms to help, sustain the shape.

9. During the next step, preheat the oven to 325 degrees.

10. Cover rugelach loaf with a towel and let stand in a warm spot for one hour or slightly longer or until the loaf is well puffed and about twice its original volume.

11. Beat the remaining egg with the one-eighth teaspoon of sugar and, using a pastry brush, brush the loaf all over with the egg wash and sprinkle evenly with poppy or sesame seeds.

12. Place the loaf in the oven and bake approximately one hour until well puffed, cooked through and golden.

Yield: One large loaf.

Note: This loaf may also be made with clarified butter, but in a kosher home it could not be eaten with meat. To clarify butter, place three sticks (three-quarters pound) of butter in a heatproof glass measuring cup. Place in an oven preheated to about 150 degrees. Let melt slowly. Carefully remove the cup. Scoop off all foam from the top and pour off the clear golden liquid on top. This is clarified butter. Discard the milky substance at the bottom.

Rugelach

(A sweet crisp)

3/4 cup confectioners' sugar

3 cups sifted flour

1/2 pound margarine (soft)

1/2 teaspoon vanilla

1 egg yolk

1. Preheat the oven to 325 degrees.

2. Combine all ingredients in a mixing bowl and mix with the hands until well blended.

3. Pull off pieces—about 36 in all—into small pieces of small size and roll out into thin sheets. Shape the dough fingers into V-shapes, crosswise and form. All shaped dough sheets.

4. Place the sheets in the oven and bake 30 minutes until they are crisp.

5. Place the sheets on a tray to turn the oven off. Let cool.

Yield: About 36 rugelach.

A Big Night for Fashion, Italian Style

striped knitted wraps covered silk jersey flowered dresses by Missoni.

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New Yorkers have had a chance to discover Italy in the last week without leaving their city. Mayor Bease proclaimed April 22 to April 29 Italian week in front of Alitalia the other day. Some 35 stores along Fifth Avenue filled their windows with Italian fashions and home furnishings and, if nothing more, Italian flags.

A highlight of the week was the Italian Fashion Ball at the Hotel Plaza Monday night when nine leading fashion houses presented their styles for next fall and winter. Elsewhere in the hotel, 31 other members of the Italian fashion industry showed their collections.

Burrows' Favorites
For their $100 tickets, American designers could support the Children's Blood Foundation, the beneficiary of the ball, feast on Italian food and wine, and have a good look at what their colleagues were up to across the sea.

Stephen Burrows, who watched the proceedings intently with Daniela Morera, the Italian fashion model turned designer, said that his favorites were Fendi, Krizia and Missoni.

Except for Fendi, whose forte is furs (using inauspicious pelts, such as squirrel, with the same finesse as sable), the show dramatized the astonishing range of Italian knitted fashions.

For day, the emphasis is on big loose sweaters or tunics over bloused pants. At night, silk jerseys and Lurex make silvery skirts and pants. Missoni topped its flowering silk jersey ankle-length evening dresses with broadly striped pointy-been knitted wraps that were a cross between capes and stoles.

Wears Own Design
What to wear to a fashion party can be a problem. Kay Unger, who designs for St. Gillian, wore her own white dress and jacket instead of one by her date, Clovis Ruffin.

Diane von Furstenberg, whose date was her husband, Egon, from whom she is separated, chose one of her own designs, a silky black and white spotted jersey tunic over pants. She didn't have a conflict—her husband sells men's clothes. Lizette Kattan, the model, wore a creamy crepe dress by her escort, Calvin Klein.

In Bogotá, Colombia, comes to New York for her Giorgio Sant'Angelo dresses because "they're so fantastic, beautiful." The saug white dress she wore with contrasting inlay effects clung fantastically, and no one was prouder than her mother, Consuelo Crespi.

Countess Crespi, who lives in Rome, chose a bright red jupétil by André Lang of that city. "He's getting younger," she said.

An Earlier Event
Viola Spilbert had Mica de Moss, a Bendel's designer, whip up her two-piece black overblouse dress that very morning.

Other dresses in the audience were by Mary McFadden (on Geraldine Stutz, Joanne Winship), Chloé (Audrey Smeltz), Jean Muir (Jean Rosenberg) and Missoni (Rosita Missoni).
Sheila Mosler's black dress with the bare shoulders was by Valentino, but the Italians didn't have the social scene all to themselves.
Mrs. Mosler had donned the black dress to appear earlier in the evening at the French Consulate, where William J. Levitt, the builder, received the Legion of Honor.

Not because his wife, Simone, was French, but because he had contributed so lavishly to the refurbishing of the Palace of Versailles, according to Gerard Gausson, who presented the award.

Mrs. Levitt was wearing a white silk crepe dress by her favorite designer, Hubert de Givenchy, who arrived just in time for the presentation from the party Bergdorf Goodman threw for him in the store.

"It's really Givenchy week," said Marion Feldman, explaining why she wore a fluttery red tiered chiffon Givenchy dress rather than one of her numerous Chaneles, and ignoring the festivities at the Plaza.

Usually in a Dior
"I had to wear a Givenchy," said Estée Lauder, who chose a speckled, low-waisted affair. Mrs. Lauder is often seen in Diors.

Pauline Trigère, who came straight from her salon, wore a teal blue wool cape, print blouse and matching teal skirt.
"I almost wore the same thing," Jacqueline Goldman said, coming over to her. "I would have been warmer." Mrs. Goldman had chosen a loog black quilted silk coat instead.

Cecile Zilka, who had worn a Givenchy wool jumper and cape to his party at Bergdorf, switched to a flower printed Lanvin dress for the event honoring Mr. Levitt.

Mrs. Levitt also managed to change clothes between the two cocktail parties, switching from a tailored red double-breasted suit to the white crepe.

Talks About 'Couture'
Mr. Givenchy, surveying the transformation of his Nouvelle Boutique at Bergdorf from a business to a social scene, noted the straw platans holding brioches filled with caviar finger sandwiches and crudites (the drinks were white wine or champagne), talked about the coexistence of ready-to-wear and couture clothes.

"My couture customers love to know what's going on in ready-to-wear," he said. "They buy it too—why should they pay so much money for a bathing suit? The only difference is in the fabric and the precision of the fit. I try to keep the mood the same."
French or Italian, Monday evening turned into one big fashion party.

One of the nice things about New York

Amusing drawings illustrate each recipe in Parson School's cookbook, "Cheap Eats."

From a School of Design Budget Cooking With Style

By MIMI SHERATON

All too often, so-called budget recipes are either depressingly drab or so gaffed-up with clever trickery they prove to be inedible. Among artists, however, this is rarely the case, a result, no doubt, of their creative imaginations plus the exigencies of life on a shoestring, a combination that usually leads to food both stylish and delicious, more of a treat than a deprivation.

Tempting evidence of that happy phenomenon is in abundance in "Cheap Eats—The Art Student's Coloring Cook Book," a yearbook "cooked and illustrated" by the editorial design students, class of '75, at the Parsons School of Design. In addition to those of the students, recipes and illustrations by members of the faculty and friends of the school are included, with contributions by Robert Motherwell, Larry Rivers, and Cipe Piroles Burin, the highly respected director, who is also the guiding light of the editorial design course and the project.

This collection of low-cost recipes includes a number of excellent soups, chicken dishes, bean and vegetable combinations, and enough savory casseroles to see you through several years of buffet dinner parties. Each recipe is accompanied by a handsome illustration, there to be colored by anyone brave enough to destroy the subtle drawings of sepia or buff vellum paper. There is also space for the own notes about the dish for preparation.

Spiral-bound and stiff-covered, the stands tent-like on the counter for referral, and, all-in-all, proves that functionalism and beauty are not an exclusive if, in fact, that point ever-proving.

Among the more delectable-sounding ferrets are cold avocado and rice soup, "the absolutely very best real Caribbean 'barefoot' rice with dried fish and shrimp, spring and summer ghatti made with tomatoes, bas toasted sunflower seeds, orange chicken, kasha with meatballs, and lovely Chinese creation of veg fried fish with vegetables, in which of potatoes masquerade as fish.

There are very few desserts and, for my tastes there is a bit too reliance on short-cuts such as garden here and canned-soup-for-soups those recipes will have great ap hot-plate cooks in college dorm apartments, or wherever.

Proceeds from the sale of "Cheap go to the school, and it may be pu at the Parsons Art Supply Store, 13th Street, fourth floor. The p $5; for an additional $1 it will i by mail.

3 Recipes From the Book

"Most people have no conception of how much better liverwurst is hot than cold," says Robert Motherwell in his contribution to the book.

ROBERT MOTHERWELL'S LATE SUPPER

20-inch long liverwurst in natural casing (avoid plastic covered one), see note
2 cans of beer

French or Italian bread or thinly sliced German dark bread.

For a late evening party get a piece of liverwurst as long as your oven will hold, say 20 inches. Place it in a pan with ½-inch of beer and bake it at 325 degrees for 45 minutes or one hour.

Place it on a carving board and serve with warm bread on hot plates.

The casing will be difficult to slice unless you have a razor sharp knife. Cut the wurst can easily be scooped out with a serving spoon.

Note: Liverwurst in natural casings are available at Karl Ehmer, 230 East 86th Street, among other places.

Steve Adams, Marc Salvé and Paul Wright are the students responsible for the following superburger recipe. It proved just as good, and a little more manageable, served between toasted halves of an English muffin, though the original version is more spectacular looking.

VIRGINIA HAM-BURGER

1 pound ground beef (preferably sirloin)
1 medium white onion
4 thick slices Virginia ham
4 medium slices Danish gradost cheese
4 slices white sandwich bread

1 loaf Italian bread (Zito's), see note below
¼ stick of butter (about 1 ounce)
Salt and pepper to taste.

This is a burger connoisseur's delight, only the finest ingredients should be used and only the best and coldest beer should be enjoyed with it. Although this recipe could be cooked anywhere it will be at its best cooked on a hot plate in an artist's loft.

Season the meat with salt and pepper and divide it into 4 equal ¼-pound patties. Melt the butter in a large frying pan. When it is good and hot (but before it turns brown) put in the slices of ham and let them fry while you chop up the onion very fine. Dump the chopped onion into the pan with the ham and cook them until they begin to get soft.

Push the ham and onion to the side of the pan and put in the beef patties. Be sure the pan is very hot so they will cook fast.

Just before the burgers are done to your liking, put a slice of ham on top of each one, put onions on top of that and cover each with a slice of cheese. Cover the pan and let the cheese melt, meanwhile toasting a slice of sandwich bread for each burger.

When the cheese has melted, lay the burger toast slices, cover each chunk of that fine bread and fit you around this dainty

Yield: 4 servings.

1 teaspoon paprika
Salt to taste $\frac{1}{2}$ pound chicken livers, picked over $\frac{1}{4}$ cup corn oil
1 egg yolk
1. Prepare the pastry and roll it in wax paper. Refrigerate until ready to use.
2. Place the meat in a saucepan and add water to cover. Add half the onion, paprika and salt. Cover and bring to the boil. Cook until the meat shreds easily and most of the liquid has evaporated. If necessary, add a bit more water as the meat cooks to prevent burning.

Let cool.
3. Meanwhile, add the chicken livers to a saucepan and add cold water to cover.
Bring to the boil and drain immediately. Chill under cold water. Drain.
4. Heat the oil and add the remaining onion. Cook until onion starts to become golden brown, stirring often.

Add the livers and cook, stirring and turning them until they lose their red color and are just cooked through, about five minutes.
5. Meanwhile, slice the cooked meat and cut it into cubes. There should be about two cups. Add this to the liver mixture. Cook, stirring, about five minutes. Add this mixture to a food grinder equipped with a fine blade.
Put the mixture through the grinder twice. Add salt and the egg yolk. Blend well.

6. Roll out about half the pastry at a time on a lightly floured board. It should be about one-eighth of an inch thick. Cut it into circles about two - and one-half inches in diameter. Scraps of dough may be gathered together, and rolled again.
7. Fill the center of each circle with one tablespoon or so of the meat mixture and fold over like crescentshaped turnovers. Press the edges to seal well. Bring the pointed sides of the crescents together and pinch to seal.

Continue until all the meat is used. There should be about 36 kreplach.
8. Drop the kreplach into boiling water and simmer 10 minutes, stirring gently with a wooden spoon so that they cook evenly. Do not cover as they cook. Drain.
Serve in bowls in piping hot chicken broth. Leftover kreplach are also good when

Wrong Addresses Snag Tax Refunds

By IRVIN MOLOTSKY
Most Americans met the April 15 deadline for filing Federal income tax returns, but if past experience is any indication, thousands of people who are entitled to refunds won't get them.
"The refunds are usually undeliverable because the wrong address is on the forms," said a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service district office in Brooklyn, which takes in Brooklyn, Queens and Nassau and Suffolk Counties.
However, he was at a loss to guess why there were so many incorrect addresses in his district. At a recent count, 2,088 checks representing last year's refunds and destined for Queens individuals and 3,273 for people in Brooklyn were returned to the government as undeliverable. Their face value was just a bit under $1 million.
In Nassau County 372 checks were undeliverable and in Suffolk there were 353. Together, they had a face value of $165,000.
Milton A. Waldman, a spokesman for the Manhattan district, said, "Returned checks are almost traditional. The number may vary, but it happens every year."

Recent Figures Cited
Here are recent figures for returned checks in the Manhattan district: 4,265 checks in Manhattan and 2,131 in the Bronx with a combined face value of nearly $1.5 million; 110 checks sent to Staten Islanders with a value of $25,000; 106 checks worth $33,000 sent to Rockland County residents and 426 checks worth $119,000 sent to Westchester County residents.
A similar situation had existed in New Jersey until a sizable dent was made in the backlog because that state has many medium-sized newspapers that serve limited areas, and the Internal Revenue Service has found that many people respond when local papers carry lists of taxpayers in their communities entitled to refunds.
A recent compilation showed that 900 checks destined for Essex County residents and worth $3,113 had been returned undelivered, as were 825 checks worth $5,433 in Passaic, Bergen and Morris Counties combined, 700 worth $2,862 in Hudson, 170 worth $614 in Middlesex, 300 worth $1,585 in Union and 120 worth $2,863 in Monmouth.

For the country as a whole, as of last summer, 89,000 checks worth $25 million had been returned to the Government as undeliverable. People who think they should have received refunds last year but did not should call the Internal Revenue Service in their areas.
Those who have moved since filing can call the office with jurisdiction for their old addresses without charge, by using the list of toll-free numbers available in I.R.S. pamphlets, including Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax."

Toll-Free Number Gets Many Calls
One toll-free number run by the Federal Government that has been getting a lot of calls lately is the one maintained to report automobile safety defects.
Gilbert L. Watson, chief of consumer services for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said, "We are getting a high degree of complaints now about 1976 cars—all models—because some of the defects of the new cars are just now starting to show up."
The most common complaints these days, he said, are:
Disc brakes. "This stems from the fact that older people are used to drum brakes and get into small cars and slam down on the brake pedal." Mr. Watson said. "This wears out the brake pads quickly, and the calipers are getting hung up."

Premature rusting. While this might appear to be a concern of appearance rather than safety, Mr. Watson said that safety was indeed involved because in extreme cases engine fumes have seeped into the interior.
Many people call the number to complain that they are not getting proper service from dealers or that the paint is peeling from their car, but Mr. Watson stressed that this was not the role of the program.
In addition to acting as the recipient of auto-safety complaints, the program offers service to potential used-car buyers. If a person calls the toll-free number and gives the operator the make, model and year of the car, the operator will check to see whether the car has been subject to a safety recall.
The customer could then find out—from the seller or, failing that, from the manufacturer—whether the defect had been repaired.

The toll-free number has been handling 30 to 150 calls a day since it was set up as a one-year experiment last Oct. 15. The number may be called without charge by people in all of New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia, plus New Yorkers living in New York City, Long Island, Buffalo and Rochester, plus Ohio residents with telephone area codes 513 and 614. The toll-free number is (800) 424-0123.

Toll-Free Digest Lists 2,500 Numbers
The Traffic Safety Administration is but one of many government agencies and businesses that are using toll-free numbers.
A spokesman for the American Telephone & Telegraph Company said that there were 12,000 customers, using more than 27,000 lines, in interstate telephone service across the country. A.T.&T. estimated that 375 million calls were being made each year on the toll-free lines under its jurisdiction, which does not include interstate calls, so the full number is even larger.
Toll-free calling has grown so much since it was started in 1967 that there is now available Toll-Free Digest, which lists 2,500 toll-free numbers, mainly in the travel, hotel and entertainment fields, but also including many government and public-service numbers.
For example, it lists the number that a woman may call for tape-recorded instructions for self-examination for possible breast cancer, (800) 462-1834, and the number to ask the Red Cross about adopting orphans, (800) 424-1180.

Toll-Free Digest does not have a toll-free number (it says it cannot at present afford the $1,800-a-month fee to cover the entire country), but the publication may be ordered by sending $2 to Box 800, Claverack, N.Y. 12513.

Crossbow Maker Asks Purchasers to Call
Among the companies using toll-free numbers is the Wham-O Manufacturing Company of San Gabriel, Calif., which wants anyone who has purchased one of its crossbows recently to call (800) 423-4174.
A defect could cause the weapon to fire prematurely, Wham-O said, but as of yesterday, no injuries had been reported.

Humphrey Pressing for Food Stamp Funds to Prevent Crisis

By NANCY HICKS
 WASHINGTON, April 27—The food stamp program may temporarily run out of money this year, according to Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, but the Ford Administration has not yet asked for additional funds.

If the program runs short of funds, the Administration could reduce benefits for the 19 million food stamp recipients by up to one-third or terminate the program.

The Administration, in not requesting more money, argues that the improvement in the economy, with its resultant increase in employment, and steady food prices, should result in a reduction in program costs.

This is the same argument used by liberal supporters of the program who have resisted Administration attempts to cut as many as three million recipients.

The money problem has arisen because the $1 billion set aside for the transitional quarter from July through September as the federal government changes the start of its fiscal year from July 1 to Oct. 1, may be $590 million, according to estimates the Department of Agriculture made last November.

Fund Debate Due Today

The Senate agriculture appropriations subcommittee meets tomorrow to consider allotting more money to food stamps for the transition quarter. Any such funds would be added to the $5.8 billion food stamp appropriation for the current, 1976 fiscal year, which ends June 30.

In a letter to Senator Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota, who raised the question of a possible fund shortage with the Administration, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard L. Felner asked today for a two-week delay in deciding whether to ask for more money.

"In this time, the department would have March enrollment figures on which to make new projections of costs. The problem, according to Mr. Humphrey, is that the appropriations subcommittee would have finished its work by then.

President Ford has several times vowed to cut the program and in ways that would include a new administrative regulation to limit eligibility to poverty-level families. This would save $280 million in the next fiscal year, the Administration estimated.

But Agriculture Department spokesmen said today it was doubtful that such regulations could go into effect by June 1, the original target date. Even if they did, the Library of Congress estimates that, with all costs savings in effect, the program would need $130 to $150 million to get through the transition quarter.

"It appears likely to me that there will be a $400 to $500 million deficit for the transition quarter," Senator Humphrey wrote in a letter to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

"The department's imposed new regulations have not been finalized, and they are likely to be challenged in the courts when issued," Senator Humphrey wrote. "The most reasonable course in my view, would be to request the amount likely to be needed."

Controversy has accompanied the rising enrollment in the program, which grew from 15 million in mid-1974 to almost 20 million recipients in April 1975, the height of the recession.

The growth led to charges that the program was "a haven for cheats and rip-off artists" and has been a prominent issue in the Presidential and Congressional campaigns.

Mr. Ford, for example, announced his intention to cut the program by regulation two days before the New Hampshire primary last February.

Most of Funds for Zumwalt Obtained Outside Virginia

RICHMOND, Va., April 27 (AP)—Most of the $68,000 that retired Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. has raised in his Virginia campaign for the United States Senate comes from out of state, records showed yesterday.

Labor unions, most of them based in New York and Washington, gave about $28,600 of the money the former chief of naval operations raised in the first three months of 1976, according to a Federal campaign disclosure report filed April 13 with the Secretary of the Senate Finance Committee. Reporters obtained the report through the United States Office of Public Records.

Admiral Zumwalt, a Democrat seeking to unseat Senator Harry F. Byrd Jr., the incumbent, also got more than $25,000 in combined contributions from more than 60 individuals outside Virginia.

Fifty-six individual contributions from Virginians, mostly small amounts, totaled less than $4,000.

Albany Passes Measure On Police Heart Attacks

By LINDA GREENHOUSE
Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, April 27—The Assembly gave final legislative passage tonight to the so-called "heart bill," a measure strongly opposed by Mayor Beame that would put into permanent law the presumption that a New York City police or fire officer's heart disease is job-related and entitles the officer to a disability benefit of three-quarters of his salary.

The overwhelming 113-to-22 vote, with one abstention, reflected heavy lobbying for the bill by the police and fire unions. The Senate passed the bill earlier this month. Governor Carey's office had no comment on whether Mr. Carey would sign or veto the measure.

While supporters of the bill argued that heart disease was, in effect, an occupational hazard of a police or fire officer's stress-producing working conditions, opponents objected that heart disease was so common that the officers should be required to prove that their disability resulted from their jobs and not from smoking, heredity, or other factors.

Time Element Explored

"Does this bill mean that if a policeman or fireman joins the department today and has a heart attack tomorrow, he will be compensated for a job-related disability?" Assemblyman Harvey L. Strelzoff demanded of the bill's sponsor George A. Cincotta, his fellow Brooklyn Democrat.

Yes, Mr. Cincotta replied, since the officers "must be assumed fit at the time of their appointment" after passing rigorous physical examinations.

Other opponents attacked the bill on fiscal grounds. Mayor Beame's office in a memorandum circulated to the legislators, said that the added disability benefits have cost the city $17 million since the bill was first enacted on a year-by-year basis in 1969.

Today's action, if the bill is signed by Mr. Carey, would make the law permanent. According to one opponent, Assemblyman Mark A. Siegel, Democrat of Manhattan, the Legislature would be effectively barred from repealing a permanent "heart law" because a permanent law, unlike an annual one, assumed the nature of a contractual benefit for the officers.

"We're told that the City of New York is fiscally irresponsible," Mr. Siegel said. "What I'm learning is that a lot of its fiscal problems don't originate in City Hall, but here in the Legislature. The city can no longer afford to be so generous, and certainly this is not the time to make our generosity permanent."

Panel Against Bill

Two weeks ago, Mayor Beame's special session study panel recommended doing away with the "heart bill" entirely.

Today marked the Legislature's return from its 12-day spring recess, and Albany's raw, 35-degree temperatures proved a rude shock to the untanned legislators. A greater shock, however, was in store for the Assemblymen, who were told by their leaders this afternoon that beginning next week the Assembly would meet five days a week in an effort to conclude its work by the end of May.

SCHOOL SMOKING

The Assembly passed a bill to ban smoking in school buses. The bill requires a bus driver to report violations to the school administration, which would have the power to exclude a repeated violator from the bus as long as other transportation was "reasonably available."

SAVINGS BANKS

A bill mandating the election of savings bank trustees by the bank's depositors passed the Assembly. Currently, savings bank trustees select their own successors.

HARNESS TRACKS

A bill that would have required the state's harness racing tracks to pay the salaries of starters, judges and other racing officials was sent back to the Assembly Ways and Means Committee in a move that was taken as testimony to the power of the harness racing lobby. The state now pays these salaries—$445,887 in the current year—and Governor Carey had proposed making the tracks assume the burden as the thoroughbred tracks now do. Bills recommended to committee almost always die there.

INSURANCE ESTIMATES

The Assembly passed a bill to require insurance companies to reimburse their policyholders for the cost of extra estimates when the companies require the estimates.

LIQUOR BUSINESS

A bill to allow 18-year-olds to hold jobs relating to the sale and manufacture of alcoholic beverages passed the Assembly. The present minimum age is 21.

WAMPUM

A controversial bill to return valuable wampum belts, now under state custody, to the Council of Chiefs of the Onondaga Nation, passed the As-

PINBALL MEASURE FAILS IN COUNCIL

Principal Sponsor Arrives Late for Action on Bill

The principal sponsor of a pinball licensing bill moved too slowly yesterday and tilted legislation that the City Council was ready to pass.

However, there will be a replay at the Council's next session, and the measure is expected to be enacted to put the light-flashing, bell-ringing machines in hotels, bars and movie theaters.

The Council had refused to act on the bill because its chief sponsor, Eugene Mastropieri, Democrat of Queens, was not present at the session. Five days ago all Council members received written notices that yesterday's meeting was to begin at noon. Mr. Mastropieri showed up at 1:20 P.M., 15 minutes after the Council had concluded its business and adjourned.

The Queens Councilman said, "Honestly, I thought the meeting was for 1:30. It's my fault." The Police Department has no objection to the legislation, which would be enforced by the Consumer Affairs Department. At present, pinball machines are licensed by the department for adult amusement places only at $50 a machine.

Under the Mastropieri bill, the machines are expected to proliferate throughout the city and bring in an estimated $1.5 million a year in new revenues. The Councilmen said there already was talk of raising the license fee to $75 a machine.

In another development, the Council leadership could not muster the necessary two-thirds vote and did not attempt to override Mayor Beame's veto of a bill banning the drinking

Gov. Grasso Signs Auster Budget Increasing 'Gas' Tax and Road Tolls

By LAWRENCE FELLOWS
Special to The New York Times

HARTFORD, April 27—Gov. Ella T. Grasso today signed a $1.3 billion budget, out the one she had asked for, but one that was just as austere and rather like it in its approach to taxation and government spending.

Apart from another penny on the 10-cent-per-gallon state gasoline tax and 25 cents instead of 15 or 20 cents for tolls on the Merritt and Wilbur Cross Parkways, there were no significant new taxes.

Accelerated tax collections and other budgetary devices were used by the General Assembly to achieve the balanced budget, but not the devices Mrs. Grasso had proposed to the Assembly in February.

When she argued that the Assembly's revenue projections were $10 million more optimistic than hers, the Assembly leaders undertook to get the approval of a daily lottery to make up the difference. Although Mrs. Grasso was not keen on gambling, she accepted the idea of another lottery, a third for Connecticut, to seal the bargain.

The daily lottery was approved by the House of Representatives yesterday by 122 to 23, with $1 million of the proceeds earmarked for an emergency food fund for welfare recipients who run out of money. Senate action is still awaited.

The budget, covering the fiscal year that begins next July 1, is designed to hold expenditures to a level just over $100 million above the budget for the current year.

A few weeks ago, the Governor was looking for ways to head off an $80 million deficit that was being projected for the current year.

The Assembly was called into special session in December, but barred Mrs. Grasso's proposals to extend the work week for state employees from 35 hours to 40 and to absorb a $30 million veterans' fund into the general fund.

Yet with the administrative economies she was able to make without legislative approval, and with a bit of improvement in the economy and in the sales tax revenues, most of the expected deficit melted away.

Finance Committee members said they were surprised that the Governor would have asked for such a large increase in the gas tax and road tolls. Mrs. Grasso went to the Assembly in its regular session in February. The Assembly gave her a budget one-time accruals wanted to save for and some she had in mind.

Among them was that would allow the state to collect a portion of annually from the phone company, and a quarter of other tax payments but only once.

The Governor has a deal of the 7 percent business services tax, which he has already cut the tax on purchases of machinery.

"I think the budget submitted was a bit better," Mrs. Grasso said.

An Energy Aide Tells of Three Rebuffs By White House in Conservation Plea

Special to The New York Times
 WASHINGTON, April 27—Roger W. Sant, for two years the Government's energy conservation chief, said in an interview that the White House had rebuffed three attempts by him to have President Ford give more conspicuous, personal support to the conservation of energy.
 He said that in 1974 and 1975 he twice proposed a conference sponsored by the White House, one along the lines of the 1974 anti-inflation conference, and once suggested a televised speech by the President on energy conservation.
 Mr. Sant related this last week without rancor. He blamed himself for not making the speech proposal as attractive as he now thinks it should have been. He praised Mr. Ford for having embraced in January 1975 proposals for mandatory energy-efficiency standards for buildings and financial assistance to help low-income families winterize their houses.
Proposal Was Registered
 Mr. Sant, 44 years old, has resigned as an assistant Federal energy administrator for conservation and environment as of May 15 to return to business. Mr. Ford accepted the resignation in a letter that expressed "deep regret."
 Mr. Sant's disclosures about failing to win more support from the President followed an announcement last week that the Energy Research and Development Administration had raised conservation to its top priority category.
 Some officials in the research agency have said privately that the President's budget office resisted the higher priority to a long inter-agency debate that resulted in a general toning down of conservation in a revised plan on energy development. But other high-ranking officials said that the debate was the kind that the Office of Management and Budget engaged in with all agencies on virtually all programs.

 The budget office, it was reported, feared that the higher priority would lead to proposals to increase spending on conservation. So, it insisted on language emphasizing the role of the private sector in fostering conservation.
Business Is Criticized
 On Capitol Hill, too, there has been criticism of the budget office for what some Democrats see as insufficient support for conservation. In asking Congress for $30 million for grants on energy conservation for states in 1977, the budget office increased planned spending for conservation to $52.6 million. But at the same time, $40 million worth of other programs was dropped or scaled back.
 Mr. Sant said that after two years of pushing energy conservation he concluded that the public would practice it "only to the extent it's economically attractive."
 Even then, he said, the public needs "an awful lot of information" it does not have. "You almost have to go door to door," he said. "People don't have the information. They don't know how much they would save with storm windows, a more efficient refrigerator."
 Even business, presumably more cost conscious and better able to appraise the economies of conservation, has done little to eliminate unnecessary consumption of energy, despite big increases in oil and electricity prices, Mr. Sant said.

 Business can save 15 to 25 percent of its energy costs "without investing a thing," he said. For that matter, added Mr. Sant, who has a master's degree from the Harvard Business School, many businessmen "don't use materials and labor efficiently," and these factors usually account for a larger share of costs than energy does.
 Mr. Sant said that the American people would drive less or accept other inconveniences to save energy in a national emergency, but not otherwise. He was asked whether this was not tantamount to saying that President Ford had failed to persuade the public that growing reliance on imported oil was a threat to the country.
 "You'd almost have to say that," Mr. Sant replied. "We've not done a very good job of showing the threats of the future."
 He said that in 1975 the Democratic Congress rejected all strong options to save energy, such as import quotas, production restrictions, rationing and much higher prices.
 Although ostensibly sympathetic to regulatory devices instead of higher prices, House Democrats yielded, Mr. Sant said, to the political power of thousands of home builders and refused to make energy standards for buildings mandatory, as Mr. Ford had proposed.

Roger W. Sant, the Government's chief for energy conservation, cites frustrations and problems of his job.

Dr. Rusk Honored; New Fund Is Established

A new Howard A. Rusk fund was announced last night by the World Rehabilitation Fund, marking its 20th anniversary with a $150-a-plate dinner for 750 persons at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The dinner honored Dr. Rusk, president and a co-founder of the fund and the director of New York University's Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine, a program he founded 30 years ago. Of $300,000 raised as a result of the dinner, more than half will go to the Rusk fund to be used by Dr. Rusk for fellowships and other projects he chooses.

Four new overseas programs were announced by Melvin R. Laird, former Secretary of Defense who is now a counselor to Reader's Digest, which has close ties to Dr. Rusk's work with the handicapped.

Corporate contributions of $20,000 each will provide facilities for fitting braces and artificial limbs in four countries: Egypt, from the Continental Oil Company; Indonesia, from the Hoffman-La Roche Drug Corporation; Brazil, from the Becton-Dickinson Corporation, a medical supply concern; and Sri Lanka, from Reader's Digest.

The decision to reconsider the course came after Dr. Aptheker complained to the American Historical Association, which was considering an investigation into the matter, and after more than 2,000 students at Yale signed protest petitions.

Hearst Lawyer Assails Shift From Hospital to Jail

By WALLACE TURNER Special to The New York Times SAN FRANCISCO, April 27— Patricia Hearst was booked into a Federal prison in San Diego this afternoon despite a quarrel here between her lawyers and the United States marshal over her removal yesterday from a hospital in Redwood City.

Mr. Johnson would not talk with reporters about the transfer, but today he called a news conference at his hotel to charge the United States marshal's staff with impropriety in the shift. "The marshal said Patty got out of bed, got dressed in three minutes or we will throw a blanket around you and drag you out of the hospital," Mr. Johnson told reporters.

Mr. Klein said that Miss Hearst was told at 8:49 A.M. that she should get ready to move. Mr. Johnson was not present but arrived after Deputy Marshal Jim Ledgewood left Miss Hearst alone in her room to dress. When the deputy went back, Miss Hearst was back in her bed.

RT LINDSEY A New York Times Special to The New York Times SAN FRANCISCO, April 27— The battle over the will of the late R. Hughes in Los Angeles is being waged in a court of law...

Mr. Soliah's mother, Elsie, who sat in the front row of spectators all during the trial, gasped when the verdict was announced and hugged a family friend, Evelyn Withnell, who was seated next to her.

Mr. Johnson said his deputy had then told Miss Hearst she would be wrapped in a blanket if she did not follow orders. "We have had experience in moving prisoners and we know how to move prisoners who don't want to be moved," Mr. Klein said.

At his news conference, Mr. Johnson said the caption for this should be "Patty Kidnapped Again," Mr. Johnson said Miss Hearst had been driven into an emotional collapse by the incident.

As the lawyer told the story, it appeared that the marshals had interrupted his legal conference with Miss Hearst with the abrupt order that she get dressed. This conflicted sharply with Marshal Klein's account.

He said the expense of maintaining Miss Hearst was a factor, as was the fact that ten deputies, a third of his force, had been tied up guarding her 24 hours a day in the hospital.

WINE TALK

How the Lack of Rain Affects the Grape and the Grower

By FRANK J. PRIAL

People who drink wine have a tendency to forget that it is a farm product, just like tomatoes or beef. They really should keep wine's agricultural origins in mind: Those origins play a major role in its price.

Rodney Strong was in town the other day, and he is one winemaker who can really articulate the problems and challenges that nature can toss in the path of the grape grower and vintner. Mr. Strong, who once made his living on the musical comedy stage in New York, is the winemaker and founder of Sonoma Vineyards in California.

'Saturation Point'

As many people are aware, it was a very dry winter in California; in fact, it was dry in most of the West's agricultural areas. That would lead most nonfarmers to conclude that the grapevines might dry up for lack of water. Not so, according to Mr. Strong.

"The vines need little water in the winter months," he said. "They are dormant then. They begin to use water when they begin to grow again, and the soil in our vineyards, even with the small amount of rain it has received this year, has reached saturation point. It will provide the vines with the water they need in the early months of summer."

The rainless winter, which Mr. Strong calls "the longest Indian Summer in the history of the reservation," had a far more serious impact on dairy farmers, wheat growers and cattle breeders. But it may hurt the winemaker in other ways.

When rain is lacking in the spring, there are often severe frosts. Vineyards such as Sonoma protect the plants against this with water—about 50 gallons per minute per acre. "On one of our vineyards," Mr. Strong said, "we use 14,000 gallons per minute. If you must protect for an average of six hours a night, that means you've pumped over five million gallons each night you must run the system, and we have protected with this system up to 21 nights in a cold spring.

"This water comes from wells and reservoirs. If the water table is low because of the winter rain shortage, then our ability to fight the frost will be limited because of lack of water."

Also, Mr. Strong said, vines that have not had sufficient water react badly to heat spells—which can be fierce in the Sonoma Valley—and will lose their leaves earlier than usual. "The leaves are the key to fruit ripening," he said. "When they drop, the fruit is exposed to sunburn, birds and bees and there is inevitably a loss in tonnage and quality." The effect of drought continuing on into spring and summer can be harmful. According to Louis P. Martini, one of the best-known wine men in the Napa Valley, fruit buds for the 1977 crop would normally form during August of this year, just before the vines begin to dry out to ripen the 1976 crop. But, says Mr. Martini, the dryness may prompt the vines to dry out earlier in the summer, in which case the buds for 1977 would not be so sound. Thus, there could be two short crops: 1976 and 1977.

Short Supply

What does this mean to the consumer? In the case of some premium wines, probably higher prices. Wines from these producers are always in short supply, and demand for them is increasing steadily all across the country. Over all, however, the impact may not be too serious. Overproduction has been a problem in California for several years, and there are quite a few people in the winemaking and selling business who would be relieved to see a bit fewer grapes around.

Oh, yes—Mr. Strong did not come east for his health. He was here to launch his wine, some of which have just been released. They include the 1973 cabernet sauvignon, 1974 chardonnay, 1972 pinot noir and 1975 Jambannesburg red wine. They are all 100 percent varietals, that is, made entirely from the named grape, except for the cabernet, which is 90 percent cabernet sauvignon and 10 percent merlot. These wines should be available in New York soon and should sell for around $3.50.

Food Costs Down Slightly Despite Rise in Beef Prices

By WILL LISSNER

Retail food prices in general dipped a little last week but beef prices continued to soar, two of the leading cuts advancing 6 cent a pound.

"Beef prices continue to climb," Consumer Affairs Commissioner Eleanor C. Guggenheimer reported yesterday. "The cost of the three beef items in our market basket last week increased by an average of 4.6 percent."

Chuck steak rose 6 cents in 96 cents a pound. Bottom round roast advanced the same amount to $1.80 a pound and ground chuck increased 2 cents to $1.07.

"Since most Americans eat more meat than is necessary to achieve the daily protein requirement, we're suggesting that people cut their meat consumption while prices remain high," Mrs. Guggenheimer said.

Whole frying chicken, a good source of protein, dropped 2 cents a pound to 63 cents. Eggs, another good source, rose 2 cents a dozen last week, but at an average of 86 cents for the Grade A large size continued to be an excellent beef substitute. Center cut pork chops dropped 10 cents a pound to an average of $1.91, but this price is still 15 cents a pound higher than a year ago.

Good Crop Expected

The cost of feeding a family of four in New York City last week was $71.47, 20 cents or 0.3 percent less than the week before and 1.4 percent higher than last year at this time. Then the total of average costs for the 38-item market basket in the 150 stores priced was $70.49.

Commissioner Guggenheimer pointed out that seasonal produce represented a good buy. Fresh spinach dropped from 63 to 61 cents for 10 ounces and potatoes from 83 cents to 89 cents for five pounds.

April 1 storage holdings of potatoes were 11 percent less than last year, the United States Department of Agriculture reported, but will be supplemented by a spring crop that is expected to top last year's small output by 17 percent. Onions are expected to be plentiful because the spring crop also is expected to be substantially higher than the small volume of 1975.

Nathan Herschberg of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets reported that "out-of-season" apples can be bought at about "in-season" prices—59-60 cents in the 3-pound bags. Green cabbage, tomatoes, cucumbers, green beans, peppers and eggplant are selling at attractive prices, he reported.

2 Major Food Companies Leaving New York City

By CARTER E. HORSLEY
Two major food companies—the General Host Corporation, which manufactures Bond Bread, and Vita Food Products, which processes fish—have decided to move from New York City to Connecticut.

While the number of employees and the amount of office space involved in the two relocations are not great, the new corporate decisions to leave the city continue a trend that was recently revived precipitously with the plans of Union Carbide and Texagulf Inc., the giant natural-resources company, to vacate Park Avenue for southern Connecticut.

The Greenwich area has had a corporate invasion in the last eight years that has produced new office space there roughly equivalent to the entire Park Avenue Building, Connecticut is now quickly catching up with Chicago as the largest concentration of corporate offices of industrial companies in the country after Manhattan.

The departure of General Host, which had a sales volume in 1975 of about $850 million, will reduce to 94 the number of companies listed among the 500 largest industrial concerns in the country that are headquartered in New York City. From 1956 to 1968, the city was home to as many as 140 of these companies and never fewer than 130.

The company, originally known as the General Baking Company, acquired the Cudahy Corporation, a major meat packer in 1971. A spokesman said it was moving because its lease for about 17,000 square feet of office space at 245 Park Avenue would expire in one year and Doubleday & Company was exercising its option to expand into its space in the building. The spokesman said General Host had had no discussions with city officials regarding the relocation. General Host has signed a lease to move into a new two-story office building at Soundview Farms on Cummings Point Road in Stamford, Conn. The building, not yet completed, will contain 35,000 square feet of office space.

The company's rent in Stamford will total approximately $8 million for the 25-year lease negotiated by Matthew Stacom of Cushman & Wakefield Inc. The move involves about 60 employees, Harris J. Ashton, the company's chief executive, lives in Greenwich, Conn.

Vita Foods, a subsidiary of Vita Foods & Williamson Tobacco Corporation—owned by the British-American Tobacco Company—has leased 18,000 square feet of office space in the Largo Building at 411 West Putnam Avenue in Greenwich.

The 10-year lease, arranged by Rudi Lazarus of William Pitt Inc., a large Greenwich real estate organization, and N. Anthony Rolfe of Sulzberger-Rolfe Inc., has an aggregate rent of about $2 million.

The company has decided to phase out by the end of October all of its operations at the Hunts Point Market in the Bronx, where it is a major tenant and where it has 15 years left on a lease with the city for a 200,000-square-foot facility. Its annual rent to the city is about $750,000.

Brooklyn Facility Leased

Edwin F. Lewis, the president of Vita Foods, who lives in Riverside, Conn., said most of the 135 regular employees at Hunts Point would move to other company facilities.

The company is leasing a 15,000-square-foot distribution facility in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, which Mr. Lewis said would "assure uninterrupted business."

The company, whose sales volume exceeds $50 million, has other facilities in Newark, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Billingsham, Wash., and Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

Vita Foods, which consolidated five locations in the city in 1972 to move to the new Hunts Point facility, cited "high operating costs" as a reason for the decision to move.

A spokesman for New York's Economic Development Administration said that the city "intends to hold Vita to the lease" and that other meetings with the company were planned.

First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti, left, and Deputy Mayor Kenneth S. Axelson, next to him, agreed that court ruling would not affect coming fiscal years in austerity plan. Victor Gotbaum, top right, municipal workers' leader, and John J. DeLury, sanitation workers' chief, have already served notice they would seek extra compensation from the city.

Police Decision Affects Only the '75-'76 Budget

ing, if upheld by the Court of Appeals, would present the city with a substantial problem in the current budget, but that it would not affect coming fiscal years in the plan.

However, Mr. Axelson emphasized that the real problem for the city would be if the court's ruling encouraged other municipal unions to seek something resembling what the police attained, and if a precedent were established that arbitrators' settlements were not subject to the current emergency wage freeze.

"That's the thing that bothers me," Mr. Axelson said. Notice that the other municipal unions would seek some extra compensation from the city in this summer's labor negotiations already was being served by Victor Gotbaum, the executive director of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, and by John J. DeLury, the head of the United Federation of Sanitation Workers Association.

"My assumption is that the city will have to make it up to us in some other way," said Mr. Gotbaum.

Effect of Ruling
The labor leaders referred to the effect of the ruling, which was issued Monday by the Appellate Division. The decision gave members of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, which refused to cooperate with the city in a wage deferral last year at the height of the fiscal crisis, a 6 percent increase retroactive to last July 1. The other unions, which cooperated in the wage deferral, are not to receive the 6 percent increase until next September.

Accordingly, Mr. Gotbaum and Mr. DeLury feel the court's ruling, if upheld, would present them with an unfair penalty for cooperating with the city. Meanwhile, Stephen Berger, the staff director of the state's Emergency Financial Control Board that is considering the pending transit workers' wage increase, said that the Transit Authority should send its chairman, David L. Yunich, back to the bargaining table if it wished stronger terms with the Transport Workers Union.

Mr. Berger was commenting on what he termed "an odd request" from the Transit Authority—that the Control Board, which is now overseeing the city's fiscal life, tighten the proposed cost-of-living raise for transit workers by insisting that it be directly tied to improved productivity.

Mr. Yunich obtained no such commitment when he bargained for the agreement reached April 1. But the Transit Authority board of directors last Friday asked the Control Board to demand this link before approving the pact.

The two labor problems—the first involving the courts, and the second involving the semi-independent transit Authority—were cited by Mr. Zuccotti and Mr. Berger in separate interviews as aspects of the complicated reality in which the city is trying to contain budget costs that extend into other governmental domains.

"One of the problems is that the city is not the sole determinant of its own destiny," said Mr. Zuccotti. "The bundle of decisions involved in this task really isn't the Mayor's alone. They relate to court rulings, the transit agency, and all the rest."

Mr. Berger went a step further and complained that the Transit Authority's board of directors appeared to be shirking its responsibility by asking the Control Board to dictate tougher contract terms.

A Place for Cover
Speaking generally of the city's budget problems with the "covered agencies"—the separate boards of directors that run the schools, the City University, transit and hospital systems—Mr. Berger said:

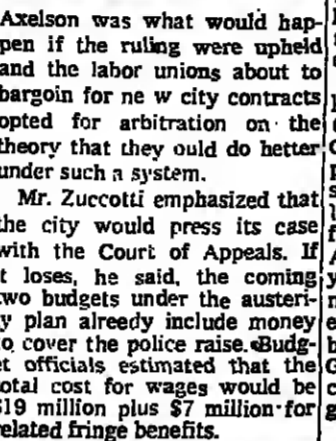

"I am discovering that the basic requirement of a covered agency is to look for some place to take cover."

Speaking in general of the transit and police problems, Mr. Berger declared: "We are not doing political science in the classroom. We are in the middle of a living, dynamic situation, and the problem is that everything that is done by other parts of government seems to add to the baseline costs of city government."

Mr. Berger said the Control Board, led by Governor Carey, would meet Friday to consider the transit agreement. The Governor already has asked for legal opinions on whether the cost-of-living raise might violate the current emergency freeze on wage increases. Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz indicated he might submit his opinion today.

Mr. Berger added that he would not have a staff analysis of Mayor Beame's latest repertoire in time or the meeting. The press of other problems, such as the transit contract, Mr. Berger said, means that he will need another two weeks to complete the analysis.

In discussing the court ruling on the police, Mr. Axelson noted that the mandate was based on the fact that the police issue was special because it involved a finding by an impasse panel and a judicial ruling based on the finding. This situation is not covered by the general wage freeze imposed last September by state legislation the Appellate Division ruled. The question asked by Mr.

Ashton Comes Back to His 'Factory'

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

With "A Mouth in the Country," whose New York premiere was given last night by the Royal Ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House, Sir Frederick Ashton has returned with his first major ballet since the 1969 "Enigma Variations."

When Sir Fred, as he is called by the dancers, retired in 1970 as the Royal Ballet's director, his admirers hoped fervently that England's greatest choreographer would find more time to compose new works.

Yet by his own account, he was strongly affected by the new day-to-day absences from the company whose style he had formed as chief choreographer since 1935.

"When you leave the factory, you forget how to use the tools," Sir Frederick said here the other day. "I had lived with and been surrounded by dancers. To be taken away — it did something to me. Quite definitely."

Even now, when the creative steam seems suddenly up, Sir Frederick gives little sign of rushing into anything new.

"I'm not working on anything, I promise you. I'm waiting for the finger of God to say this is it. Here is the apple, orange and banana and I'm waiting for it to say, 'do the orange.'"

For a time, Sir Frederick contented himself with activities outside the Royal Ballet, such as choreographing "Tales of Beatrix Potter," films about Peter Rabbit and his friends, in which he himself played Mrs. Tiggywinkle. "It was ghastly," he recalled, referring to the weight of the stuffed-animal masks and not to his own charming dances. "I could only see out of the nostrils."

It is typical of this great classical choreographer that he should be as concerned with the lesser body of his work as with the side that made Gertrude Stein, a self-described genius once looking for counterparts, reel out: "We met Fred Ashton. I am always asking Alice Toklas do you think he is a genius. She does have something when he is a genius, so I always ask her is he a genius."

That genius was saluted in a "this-is-your-life" type of farewell gala in July 1970 at Covent Garden in London, when the Royal Ballet brought back excerpts from many early no-longer-performed Ashton ballets. The evening was prepared without Sir Frederick's knowledge and it left him "in a trance." He has never been able to look at the videotape of the program. "I don't live on memories," he said.

Sir Frederick Ashton

Worked on Pas de Deux The "odd bits" he has done until "A Month in the Country" have included the choreography for the opera "Death in Venice" and several pas de deux.

Despite the brevity of such duets, he thinks of the pas de deux as "a complete form." He explained: "It has to be a sonnet and lyrical poem in itself. It needn't be less great because it's not

"(It needs her intensity)" in the leading role, be chosen an unknown in the corps, Denise Nunn, to dance the older woman's adolescent rival.

"It's fascinating to sense a potential in someone and see if they can bring it out," he said. Sir Frederick's most celebrated success in this sense was, of course Dame Margot Fonteyn, who was only 15 years old when she began the 35-year collaboration with him that eventually made both of them international figures.

"Margot was a slow developer," Sir Frederick said. "She needed a tremendous amount of work in her."

Never in those days of the mid-30's did he ever conceive a relatively unknown dancer named Fonteyn would lead the company now called the Royal Ballet to the glittering success of his famous opening night at the old Met in 1946.

"We never thought of what it could all become," he recalled. "One thought of expressing oneself and of doing the best one could. I never thought of future goals."

Supports MacMillan

If the Royal Ballet has changed in any way under his successor, Kenneth MacMillan, this is inevitable, he declared. "No two people think alike and he can't possibly be expected to work in my way and must work along his own convictions. And I support him 100 percent."

Now in his 70th year, Sir Frederick regrets that "young choreographers won't submit at any period to complete adoration of any superior master." His own mentors were Leonid Massine, Bronislava Nijinska and Dame Marie Rambert. "I wasn't idiotic about it," he said, "but never did I not adore them."

His return to New York has been "very thrilling." In 1934, he recalled, prospects for ballet in Britain seemed so poor that he considered settling in New York. Advised that prospects in ballet were even poorer in the city because the rival modern dance movement was in ascendancy, he returned home. Had he stayed, the course of ballet in both Britain and the United States would have been quite different.

'So Long, 174th Street, Is New Musical at the Harkness

SO LONG, 174th STREET, a musical book by Joseph Stein, music and lyrics by Stan Daniels. Based on "Enter Laughing" from the novel by Carl Reiner. Setting by James Riley. Costumes by Stanley Shinnott. Lighting by Richard Nelson. Hairdressing by Azar. Musical direction by John Lesko. Orchestrations by Luther Henderson. Dance music arranged by Vally Krieger. Production supervisor, Stone Wilkoff. Choreography by Luther Henderson. Directed by Bert Sheveloff. Produced by Robert Morse and George S. Irving, who are two of the joys of our musical theater. Mr. Stein—who had what one might call a certain success with "Fiddler on the Roof"—wrote his own book. So what went wrong? How did "Enter Laughing" end up leaving us yawning?

Joseph Stein, called "Enter Laughing" which ran for a year on Broadway in 1963, and was based on a novel by that very funny man, Carl Reiner. The show has been directed by Bert Sheveloff, who is brilliant, and it stars Robert Morse and George S. Irving, who are two of the joys of our musical theater. Mr. Stein—who had what one might call a certain success with "Fiddler on the Roof"—wrote his own book. So what went wrong? How did "Enter Laughing" end up leaving us yawning?

Robert Morse and Loni Ackerman

It is a formula show. You take Mr. Morse as the lovable klutz, the kind of man who cannot put his best foot forward without dropping his mouth over it. Then you have a show-business ambience—a little man trying to make it big on the Great White Way, when he should really have been what his father was, a pharmacist. It is just a little like "How Not to Succeed in Show Business Without Really Not Trying." Mr. Morse has been there before, and so have we.

Then there was the music and lyrics by Stan Daniels. Or rather there is not the music and lyrics by Stan Daniels. Mr. Daniels is a producer of the Mary Tyler Moore Show on television, and he should stay where he is well off.

Mr. Morse was wide-eyed and adorable, singing and even dancing his heart out, running around in concentric circles like a harassed juggler trying to make everything somehow work. Mr. Irving, avuncular and superior, also did his most considerable best. But when the music and lyrics do not work for a musical, the musical does not work. People should listen before putting money where their ears are.

'East Liberty, Pa.' Salutes 200 Years
The WPA Theater will salute the Bicentennial with the production of a new American play, "East Liberty, Pa.," by Alan Bates. Described as a satire with an irreverent look at the American dream, "East Liberty, Pa." will give previews on May 5 and 6 and open to the critics on May 7. Performances will be given from Wednesday through Sundays until May 30. Richard Gaffield will direct.

MY FAIR GREENERY This year's 30th annual Gramercy Park Flower and Horticulture Show has a Bicentennial theme for the displays of greenery and blooms filling the galleries of the stately landmark National Arts Club, the former residence of Samuel J. Tilden, at 15 Gramercy Park South. Under the heading of "American Legends," visitors will see floral and plant arrangements grouped by such labels as Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher, Paul Bunyan, Baby Doe, the Gold Rush and China Clipper, in depictions of some facet of legend or history. There will also be a Bicentennial salute in a replica of a Colonial herb garden.

Among the competitive entries in the event, organized by Gramercy Neighborhood Associates and sanctioned by the city's Bicentennial Corporation, are a hotly contested avocado-growing group, terrariums, foliage and flowering plants, cacti and succulents and Anything Goes, a demonstration of what can be made to sprout in city apartments and houses. The flower show runs today and tomorrow until 10 P.M., with doors opening tomorrow at 10 A.M. Admission is by voluntary contribution. More information: GR 5-5979.

With Sanity in Pursuit

By ANATOLE BROVARD

THE PSYCHO SQUAD. By William W. Crain. P.H.D. 165 pages. Saturday Review Press/E. P. Dutton. $7.95.

When the police have left and "everyone is at wit's end," then the psychiatric emergency team is called. It arrives to "find the original disturbance intensified by the hullabaloo. Someone here is acting 'crazy' and it is the team's job to decide whether that person will be better off in the hospital or out of it. As Dr. William Crain puts it in "The Psycho Squad," they are obliged to "search the personal premises... with a dubious warrant."

Under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act in California, certain designated professionals—psychiatrists, psychologists, psychiatric social workers and psychiatric nurses—have the right to sign an individual into the hospital for a period of 72 hours, regardless of his wishes. If, in the judgment of these professionals, the person is a danger to himself, a danger to others, or gravely disabled.

The decision may have to be made in minutes. While psychoanalysts or psychiatrists in hospitals may take months to make a diagnosis, PET teams, as they are called, must do it on the spot. The ambiguity of the situation hangs over everyone's head like a threat. Is this person psychotic, or is this simply "living theater?"

Is America caught up in some theatrical moodiness, living out its own myth in some strange, almost self-conscious way? The PET teams are "mental health firemen." Here is a person smoking with anger, with grief, with fantasy. Should people be protected against him? Should he be protected against himself? Or should his civil rights be protected against a controversial law? If the subject does seem psychotic, is it also possible that he is justified in his madness, that it is his right, under the circumstances, to behave in an extraordinary way? It is conceivable that this particular act of "madness" is a temporary and necessary opening up, just as, in extremely hot weather, someone opens a fire hydrant.

An Act of Revenge

Sometimes the call to the PET team appears to be an act of revenge and the question becomes one of who is insane, the caller or the subject of the call? Or both? For some "sane" behavior, the only answer may be "insanity." If someone inflicts his "rationality" on someone else without intermission, the victim of this treatment may have no other choice but to flare up into "irrationality."

A man is "let go" by his employers, says Dr. Crain, but they do not realize how dramatically accurate that expression is. The person who is "let go" may sail away like a runaway balloon or drop to the ground like a discarded piece of trash. Someone who is "fired," the author says, may suddenly find his self-esteem going up in flames, or his security, or the only organizing principle of his life.

In "The Psycho Squad," we read about an elderly man who complains that his wife will no longer kiss him good night. This may be the straw that breaks the camel's back. He decides that such a reality, one in which, after 40 years, his wife stops kissing him good night, is not worth holding onto. What should the PET team do? Suggest that his wife resume kissing him good night? Take the old man to the hospital? Or let him give vent, like King Lear, to his feelings of abandonment?

An elderly woman announces the end of the world outside a supermarket. It is bad for business, says the manager. Besides, she is wearing only a transparent plastic raincoat. Is a plastic-wrapped naked old woman a threat to the community? Is her unclad body a case of indecent exposure, or is it a moral lesson? The PET team decides to leave her alone. It is legal, under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, to be insane if you are "safe." Bureaucracy has a soft spot for safety.

A man who has been brought into the clinic because he was "talking wildly" says: "I always liked words. Even as a child I got along well with words. I used them and they used me. I have stacked words. I have tasted words." Is he a psychotic or a poet? Dr. Crain says: "I personally think some words taste better than others."

Friday is the busiest day of the week. For the lonely and frightened, the weekend waits like a mugger. Everyone is "fired" from the protection of his job on the weekend. Those who live alone have only themselves for company during 48 shapeless hours. "He doesn't know what to do with himself" is one of the commonest complaints made to the PET team. Who does know what to do with himself? Dr. Crain wonders. How does he know?

A Rock Star's Complaint

A girl has been pestering a rock star with phone calls, claiming to be his legitimate wife. The rock star's lawyer calls the PET team. The girl is a tall, exceptionally pretty redhead; she is ironing when they arrive. Dr. Crain, who, under the pressure, is becoming a bit of a poet himself, says: "I thought her legs were too strong for her to be disturbed." What does he mean? Does he think that she can clamp her legs around her sanity in an unbreakable hold? Or that a girl with legs like that ought to be able to have her way?

Another woman says: "I feel I am running at... at breakneck speed, as if sanity were in pursuit." But sanity is too painful for her, too lonely, and Dr. Crain cannot see how he can advise her to stop running. An older woman frequently explodes into rages and her husband calls in the team. Their life is not very secure and it seems that she has reason for anxiety. "So what does she want me to do?" her husband asks. "Does she want me to suffer because she does?" "Damn right I do!" she screams. "Who wants to suffer all by themselves?"

"The Psycho Squad" offers a domestic picture of mental disturbance, but the human animal cannot be wholly domesticated. Sometimes it has to howl, and we have to decide whether that howl is a disturbance of the peace or a cry for a peace that never existed. And then we have to answer it with something other than the siren howl of the ambulance or the paddy wagon.

Washington Star and Unions Agree on 200 Layoffs

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 27—The financially distressed Washington Star reached an agreement today with 10 unions that will eliminate 200 jobs and save about $6 million a year. The publisher, Joe L. Albritton, later said he would inject $6 million in new capital in the paper.

In a joint statement, representatives of the unions and Mr. Albritton said that "management and labor were hopeful that the agreement on a reduction in force and an eight-month wage freeze would ensure survival of the newspaper, of vigorous competitive daily journalism in the nation's capital and of a strong and healthy unionism in Washington newspaper publishing."

Mr. Albritton, a Texas millionaire, began acquiring control of The Star in 1974 from a closely knit group of family owners. The Star is the only daily competitor here of The Washington Post, a morning newspaper.

Mr. Albritton, in announcing the matching commitment of $6 million in new capital, said that the negotiations leading up to the cost cutting agreement had revealed "a spirit of foresight and commitment" by the unions.

"The agreements with the unions were accomplished in a quiet and mature atmosphere and the magnitude of the accommodations are of historic proportions," the publisher said. "They will assure the continued growth of the Star and the real beneficiaries of these negotiations will be the newspaper readers and advertisers here who will continue to have a good newspaper city."

Under the agreement, unless at The Star agreed to submit to membership ratification Mr. Albritton's plan for layoffs and early retirements.

The statement called the agreement, under which 100 of The Star's 270 printers are to leave the payroll within 18 months and other unions are to give up smaller numbers of jobs within their jurisdictions, "unique in the history of labor-management relations in the Washington newspaper industry."

The typographical workers at The Star, which has one of the country's most automated composing rooms, had received lifetime job guarantees under an earlier settlement. It was reported today, however, that 68 of the 100 composing room job cuts that the new agreement requires by the middle of next year had already been effected under a special retirement inducement made by the publisher. Mr. Albritton had offered a one-time bonus of $18,000 to printers who left the payroll by last Friday, and $15,000 to those who depart before next year.

There were 37 job cuts in the jurisdiction of the Newspaper Guild, the editorial, clerical and commercial union, including 13 in the newsroom, and about 20 of 80 pressmen. The publisher's statement did not detail how the new $6 million would be spent, but Star employees say the newspaper has been acquiring costly, but cost-saving, new electronic equipment. The Star's circulation and advertising income reportedly are up.

Strike Leader to Consider Action Against Goodyear

Special to The New York Times

GENEVA, April 27—American labor's consumer boycott of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company may be extended next week to the products of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Peter Bommarito, president of the striking United Rubber Workers, said here today.

The American union official, who attended a meeting here to enlist foreign trade-union support for the 68,000 striking rubber workers, said that a decision would be taken after he sees "what we have on the bargaining table" on Thursday upon his return to the United States.

Mr. Bommarito said he felt "very good" after the two-day session held by the rubber industry division of the Federation of Chemical and General Workers Unions to chart a program of "support action" for the American strike. Unions grouping rubber workers in seven Western European countries and Japan were represented at the session with Mr. Bommarito, whose union is also established in Canada.

A call to all of the 180 affiliated unions that the federation says it has in 70 countries to make worldwide the consumer boycott of Firestone products, was announced at the end of the session.

American union against Firestone, as the initial "target company" in its negotiations in the United States with the Big Four automobile tire manufacturers, has the full endorsement of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. The B. F. Goodrich Company and Uniroyal Inc. also have been struck.

The international support for the consumer boycott will be extended to cover the products of the other struck companies whenever the American union decides to move against these concerns, it was announced.

A "wild" ban on overtime work at plants of all four struck companies and the mounting of their inventories to block any diversion of their output to offset the loss of production from the American strike, was also voted by the federation.

measures decreed at national level by may not have a strong weight" to the strength of the strikers' union.

If Dry Dock Country were in the state of Maine, we could offer you a checking account

If Dry Dock Country were in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire or Vermont we could offer you a checking account.

Isn't that crazy!

This week a bill enabling New York State savings banks to offer checking accounts to their depositors is being considered by the legislature in Albany.

The Cincotta-Conklin Bill is a good bill. It will, at long last, grant New Yorkers a right already enjoyed by the citizens of just about every state in this area.

But bills like it have been regularly defeated in the past, so we are urging you—and every New Yorker—to rally round and make your feelings known in Albany.

If enough of us speak up right now, we at Dry Dock and our fellow savings bankers will be able to offer you, not only the highest interest rates allowed, but the convenience of checking accounts as well.

Fill out this ballot now and—

- 1) Mail it yourself, 2) bring it to any branch of the Dry Dock and we'll mail it, or
- 3) take it to any other savings bank and they'll mail it.

Gertrude Ederle All Aglow In Sports Spotlight Again

By TONY KORNEISER

Yesterday morning the windows were shut tight and the shades were drawn in the three-story house on 41st Road in Flushing, Queens, where Gertrude Ederle lives.

Gertrude Ederle swimming the English Channel in 1926

There were some papers scattered on the front lawn, and the grass needed trimming. It appeared as if nobody was home, as if whoever was living there was busy living somewhere else.

But Gertrude Ederle was home; only she was not receiving any visitors. Yesterday morning she was not up talking; she was saving her strength for a testimonial dinner.

Last night, in the 50th anniversary year of her swim across the English Channel, she was to be a guest of honor along with other outstanding athletes in various sports of the last 50 years.

But surely none was as legendary as Gertrude Ederle, the butcher's daughter.

On Aug. 6, 1926, Miss Ederle accomplished what many people had called impossible. She became the first woman to swim the English Channel, inching her way through the 21 miles of cold choppy waters despite a storm so severe that the Channel had been closed to normal shipping.

She swam from Cape Griz-Nez in France to Kingsdown on the English coast, answering her trainer's pleas to quit and seek the safety of the trailing launch with hearty cries of "Wa! for!"

Flushing Meadows, Queens, she swam for the world to see.

And last night, she said: "If God called me tomorrow, I'd go willingly. I've led a full life, a beautiful life."

Two months ago, her closest friend—one of the two women who shared the house in Flushing with her—died, almost in her arms.

Yesterday morning she was not ready to talk about it. Last night, however, she was radiant. "I think it's a beautiful thing after 50 years," she said.

She never married. She lost almost all her hearing soon after the Channel swim, when she suffered a nervous breakdown during the vaudeville tour.

She fell down a flight of stairs more than 40 years ago, injuring her back to such an extent that she remained in various casts for more than four years.

When she returned to New York, she returned as a legend in her own time. Two million people rained ticker tape on her parade up Broadway.

The William Morris Agency booked her at $2,000 a week on a vaudeville tour that took her across the United States, into big cities and tank towns, where she gave swimming exhibitions and answered questions.

Although in 1966 she told a reporter: "Don't write any sob stories about me"—the years have not been particularly kind to America's best girl.

CORRECTIONS

The telephone number for village Visiting Neighbors Inc. was listed incorrectly in The Times yesterday. The correct number is 928-5868.

People Scare Her

"The tension on Trudy is terrific," Miss Espada said. "You realize, people scare her. She is grateful that she remembers her, but she doesn't want to go to this. She is deaf, and the people, when they crowd around her and ask her things, she doesn't hear them. She can't talk to anyone unless she can see their faces. I didn't want her to go. I wanted to cancel it. But her family, they say she should go. So she is trying."

Miss Ederle is described by those who know her as a simple woman, a woman devoted to helping others. She is mechanically inclined to the point where some in the neighborhood call her "Miss Fix-It."

At 69 years old, time has slowed her stride. She is alone most of the time now. She is in good health, but she is easily excited.

She rarely goes into Manhattan; she and Miss Espada are fearful because of what they read in the papers and see on television. Her days are spent keeping busy around the house, and at nights she watches TV. Miss Espada says, "She loves those cowboys."

In effect, Miss Ederle has gone from a legend in her own time to a relic in every one else's, trotted out on anniversaries of her triumph to bask in the glow of an America that used to be.

She rarely swims now; only when she visits friends in Highlands, N. J., where they named a park after her a park that, naturally, has a pool.

Last night she was ready to be a champion again. And as Miss Espada spoke from the porch, a shadowed figure was seen at the window. And through the lace she appeared almost ghostlike. But it was only for a moment. Then Gertrude Ederle, America's best girl, disappeared back inside to get ready.

Is Accused of Political Influence

DEAN L. HESS Corporation a 99-year lease on the market, rent-free for the first year. The lease was amended in Arol's favor in 1973. Both transactions are under inquiry by Maurice H. Nadjar, the special state anticorruption prosecutor.

Alfred Allega, a banana importer, is one of the merchant witnesses. In a telephone interview, he recalled that the merchants had agreed in 1971 to support the Arol project of a written promise by the promoter not to raise the rents. But when the lease was granted, Mr. Allega said, his rent was raised in stages from $1,000 a month to $6,000 today.

Alleged Offers Cited

When several large tenants remonstrated with Mr. Buntzman at a meeting, Mr. Allega said, "He said he'd gone to Wisconsin—he said Lindsay offered to give him Hunts Point, too, and he said, 'Cunningham's my lawyer, and anything you want to fight, you have to fight in the Bronx courts.'"

Mr. Allega said Mr. Buntzman had "just point-blank called me and said you have to get out of here." But because he had a large investment in his business, the merchant said, he accepted the rent increases.

Mr. Allega said he had recounted the affair to Nicholas Scoppetta, the city's investigation Commissioner.

Arthur Bohrer, a frozen-foods wholesaler who described himself as the largest employer in the market, refused to give in, as did the Eastern Wire Corporation. As a result, he said in an interview, both ran into harassment that caused them finally to leave the market and the city.

Mr. Bohrer, who is now in New Jersey with a payroll of 200, said the wine concern had suffered a serious flood, while he ran into difficulties with traffic policemen and an elevator inspector.

In a court proceedings that followed, the inspector acknowledged that, four days after he had approved Mr. Bohrer's elevator as safe, he had an inspection at the suggestion of an Arol employee and condemned it. Mr. Bohrer eventually agreed to leave the market in 1973, and Arol agreed not to trouble him during his final months.

Mr. Bohrer also said that he had heard Mr. Buntzman's boast about his influence with Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Cunningham. He added that he had told this to Mr. Scoppetta.

"When Buntzman called us into his office—we had a lease, mind you—we said we were going to talk with the city. He laughed. 'I'm John Lindsay's biggest campaign contributor, and I'm going out to Wisconsin with a bag of $300,000.'"

Sources close to the investigations said there was evidence of a substantial donation, considerably less than $300,000, however. But no evidence has been brought to light that the lease was awarded in return for such a donation.

Considerable evidence exists, however, that middle-ranking city officials repeatedly questioned the wisdom, propriety and legality of the lease and its amendment. These objections were pressed upon D. Kenneth Patton, the Economic Development Administrator, but he persuaded the Board of Estimate to approve the transactions.

The gymnasium of Staten Island Community College yesterday as 376 immigrants from 56 countries were granted citizenship

Bicentennial Citizens Are Sworn In on S.I.

A flag-draped platform in the gymnasium of Staten Island Community College yesterday temporarily replaced the Federal District Court-house in Brooklyn as 376 immigrants from 56 countries were granted citizenship at a Bicentennial celebration in their honor.

Buses transported the candidates for citizenship from the courthouse to the Sunnyside campus of the college, a unit of the City University of New York, where they and their families were served box lunches provided by the college's student-faculty association in the student lounge.

The Creators of the Event

After Judge Mark A. Costantino administered the oath of citizenship and the candidates made the Pledge of Allegiance, the new Americans greeted a reference to their status as "Bicentennial citizens" with loud applause, and several with a tear or two.

The moving of the naturalization procedure from the Federal Courthouse in Brooklyn to the Sunnyside campus was a result of the sentiments of Judge Costantino and two other men, Judge Costantino, a resident of Staten Island's New Dorp section, is a son of immigrant parents from Italy.

Cooperating with him in planning the ceremony were Dr. William M. Birenbaum, the college's president, whose parents were immigrants from Russia, and Les Trautmann, managing editor of The Staten Island Advance, a daily, whose grandparents came from Germany.

Words of Congratulations

In an interview before the ceremony, Dr. Birenbaum explained his enthusiasm for transferring the event from the Brooklyn courthouse to his campus by saying:

"Our country is really meant to be an open admissions' country, just like this university is meant to be an 'open admissions' university. I felt this would be the best way to mark the college's first celebration of the Bicentennial."

Mr. Trautmann, in addressing the new citizens, said: "In my 25 years as a newspaperman, I have never witnessed a ceremony like today's, and this college is certainly a fitting place for this ceremony. We are one oasion with great diversity. Welcome to it."

Some of the new U.S. citizens reacting to their new status. There was also a tear or two after the judge who swore them in referred to them as "Bicentennial citizens."

And Judge Costantino told them: "In this year, you have an absolute right to cast what we call a secret ballot to select the man you want to represent you [in the White House] and also in the State Legislature. Do not fall into the vacuum of those who complain and do not do anything about it. Exercise that freedom."

After the ceremony, one of the new citizens, Greek-born George Papadimitropoulos of Queens, exclaimed: "Poli kalla! That's Greek for 'It's very great.'"

Added his friend, George Poubouridis, also of Queens: "Poli kalla! That means 'I'm so happy because I'm an American citizen, too.'"

Mrs. Wedell sitting by the coffin of her fiancé, Joseph Horn Jr., before it was taken to the ground yesterday at Mount Pleasant Cemetery in East Moriches, L.I.

Held for Man Killed on Nuptial Day

RAY GURTE Father Power returned to St. John's Church to offer a mass for Mr. Wedell, a former Navy man and most recently an assistant at a local nursing home. Seated in the pews, their eyes reddened by tears, were his mother, four brothers and two sisters. Occasionally, her children would touch Margaret Wedell in reassurance. Her son was buried in the national cemetery in Picoletown, L.I.

Earlier this morning, St. John's Church had been the scene for another funeral service for Mr. Metzki, a sophomore at Central Moriches High School. He is survived by his parents and two sisters. He, too, was buried at Picoletown.

And at the Seay Memorial Chapel in Riverhead, mourners gathered at services for Mr. Bunn, a recent high school graduate. He is survived by his parents, a brother and four sisters.

Here in this rural area, the deaths of Mr. Horn and his three friends—two others are in Brookhaven Memorial Hospital, one in satisfactory condition, the others still in critical condition—caused widespread shock. Each of the dozen residents interviewed today expressed sympathy not only for Mr. Horn's father and four brothers and sisters, but also for Miss Warkowski.

Anker Orders Closing or Conversion of 37 Schools After June

By LEONARD BUDER School Chancellor Irving Anker announced yesterday that 37 school buildings would be closed or converted to other uses after the current term ends in June, forcing the shift of 20,000 pupils from their existing schools.

In most cases, he said, the pupil shifts will require these youngsters to walk an additional "four or five blocks" to their new schools. He emphasized that no additional transportation of pupils would be required.

The Chancellor said that the school closings and conversions would save the financially troubled city system about $5 million a year in custodial, repair and supervisory costs.

"We face tremendous budget cuts next year for which we must seek economies," Mr. Anker said.

The new closings are in addition to the 27 facilities that

Prospects for Port Authority Mass-Transit Programs

BY EDWARD C. BURKS For the second time in less than four years, the Governors of New York and New Jersey have announced a mass-transit construction program involving heavy financing by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey. Only the most optimistic, however, will be expecting sleek new trains to materialize rapidly.

The announcement last week by Governors Carey and Byrne spoke of an infusion of $240 million—half of which would go to each state—for long-delayed transit projects, mainly rail construction or improvement.

With such local financing there is the hope of vast Federal aid from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration under the 80-20 Federal-local matching formula for capital projects.

More Problems Now

Once again visions were conjured up of high-speed trains from Pennsylvania Station to Kennedy International Airport, fast new trains on a 17-mile extension of the Manhattan-New Jersey PATH transit line from Newark to a Newark Airport station and then on to Plainfield in a crowded commuter corridor.

These were the two glitzy projects in the 1972 announcement by Govs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and William T. Cahill of New Jersey. They had finally cowed the powerful mass-transit-shy Port Authority—which was wealthy from motor vehicle toll revenues—into mass-transit ventures.

Yet not a single rail cross-tie had been laid as a result of the 1972 announcement, which talked of transit projects costing, with Federal aid, more than $650 million.

Will it be different this time? Problems, controversies and costs have multiplied in the meantime. The costs of the Manhattan-Kennedy rail connection are now figured at nearly a half billion dollars. The PATH extension project in New Jersey has been criticized, especially by Senator Clifford P. Case, as a boondoggle—a far too expensive extension of a third-rail, subway-type service that might benefit a few building speculators but would not properly serve the public.

Senator Case and various commuter and community groups have urged an upgrading of the Conrail Jersey Central Commuter Service in the same corridor that the costly PATH extension would supplant.

Prices are up sharply on two of the other Jersey proposals for mass-transit improvements with Port Authority financing: direct access to Manhattan's Pennsylvania Station for Conrail's Erie Lackawanna commuter service and electrification of the New York and Long Branch railroad providing commuter service to and from Newark and New York for residents of the northern Jersey Coastal area.

Dr. William J. Ronan, Port Authority chairman since 1974 and a mass-transit advocate, concedes that the Manhattan-Kennedy rail link "is not moving at all" because of financing problems. A few months ago he estimated its total cost—in other major transit applications including people-mover connections to the various air terminals at Kennedy—at $469 million, or 10 times the city's estimate of 1968. This is so, he said, even though existing trackage or right-of-way would be used most of the distance.

Because New York State had other major transit applications to put before the Federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration for 80 percent financing, the Port Authority found it unrealistic to hope for Federal aid from that source for the Kennedy rail connection.

Efforts to obtain Federal aid from "airport" development funds have been unavailing, and Dr. Ronan says that the Kennedy link—the kind of rail service available at key European airports—remains "on the back burner."

Last December the Urban Mass Transportation Administration declined to aid the PATH extension project as far too costly—amounting to an outlay of nearly $50,000 in capital spending for each potential new rider. The Port Authority had asked for a grant of $278 million, constituting 80 percent of the estimated cost.

But Robert E. Patricelli, the Port Authority's development administrator, said that the expansion cost had been underestimated by about $55 million. He also said that in the remaining three years of his agency's six-year financing authorization, New Jersey might expect to receive $350 million in Federal aid for all its mass-transportation projects. He suggested the resubmission of a coordinated program.

Yet Jersey projects now labeled "priority"—including the modernization and re-equipping of Conrail's Erie Lackawanna electric line ($127 million), access to Manhattan ($40 million), the PATH extension, and the Long Branch electrification ($120 million)—were counting more than $605 million in Federal aid.

Obviously Jersey planning would have to be trimmed back or the local share substantially increased, or both. One way of trimming back would be to substitute a much less costly up-grading of the Jersey Central's commuter service in the Newark-Plainfield-Raritan corridor for the PATH construction.

Both State Legislatures repealed "covenants" that kept the authority from using revenues for rail projects. But authority bondholders challenge the legislation in court. The lost in a lower court in New Jersey but have appealed.

2 Held in Mugging of Hamill's Mother

Two 21-year-old Brooklyn men have been arrested on charges of mugging the 65-year-old mother of the columnist Pete Hamill near Prospect Park. According to the police, Anne Hamill had left her home in the Park Slope section at about 7:30 P.M. Monday when a car pulled up, a young man jumped out, knocked her to the ground and snatched her purse. The police said the suspect then jumped back into the car, which was driven by another man, and the two sped off.

However, the car was trapped in traffic nearby and two police officers arrested the suspects without a struggle. The suspects were identified as Vincent Walker of 1179 Lincoln Place and Ronald Robinson of 954 Troy Avenue.

Man Seeks $1.5 Million From Widow

Details of a suit involving a 62-year-old businessman who is claiming $1.5 million from a wealthy New York widow on the ground that he gave up his career because she guaranteed him "sumptuous living and maintenance for the remainder of his life" were disclosed yesterday in State Supreme Court. The businessman, Leonard Wilson Trimmer, has been ordered to show cause today why the records of the widow, Catherine Breyer Van Bommel, should be subpoenaed. According to court papers, Mrs. Van Bommel, who is 70 years old, is said to be worth $40 million.

Warden Acquitted on Drug Charges

Albert T. Collier, the warden of the Essex County Jail in Newark, was one of six defendants acquitted of charges of participating in an alleged conspiracy to distribute heroin and cocaine. The jury found the defendants not guilty after a seven-day trial in Federal District Court in Manhattan. Mr. Collier, who was charged with having given other defendants information about a narcotics investigation, took a leave of absence as warden during the trial.

Friends Find Man Beaten to Death

Friends who called on Roberto Bosch found the 47-year-old man lying bound, beaten and dead on the living room floor of his first-floor apartment at 155 East 51st Street in the East Flatbush section of Brooklyn. Robert Gadson, a detective of the 12th Homicide Zone, said that the apartment had been ransacked and robbed. Mr. Bosch had worked in a nearby tire store.

Basketball Recruiters Bagging Local Schoolboy Coaches, Too

By ARTHUR PINCUS
Basketball recruiting is in full swing, but three of the most interesting signed recruits in New York are coaches, not players.

Hartman at Kansas State; Malone joined Dick Stewart, the new coach at Fordham, earlier this month, and Kestenbaum is preparing to go to Centenary in Shreveport, La., where he will work for Riley Wallace.

Reiner's stars, Ty Ladson and Curtis Redding, may well wind up in Manhattan, Kan., but, Reiner says, Kansas State recruited him as long as they recruited Ladson. But when they talked to me they weren't talking about Ladson, I think they made a smart move.

Malone, about the same age as Reiner, also has two championships to his credit. He will not have to uproot his family as Reiner and Kestenbaum must. But he, too, is leaving a secure job. "I don't think I'd ever get fired by Power," Malone says.

Malone will have an integral role as Fordham tries to rebuild its program under Stewart, who had been an assistant at the University of Oregon. Lending Credibility. "It was essential that I have an assistant who was well thought of in New York," said Stewart. "Very quickly my program was moving in the right direction. Not many people knew who I was, but Brendan proved that Fordham had made a commitment to its basketball program."

Undke the other two, Kestenbaum has been actively seeking a college position. "It wasn't so much I wanted to get out of high school ball," he said, "it was I wanted to get into college ball." One close observer of high school basketball in the city explained the coaching exodus: "The high schools in New York are in trouble and the talent is way down in the last couple of years." While each man says his primary goal is to help the program he is getting into, the long-range goal of an assistant is to become the man in charge. The only way to do that, however, is to serve an apprenticeship.

Announcing: The Continental Group

"It's no longer appropriate to be considered simply a can company when what we do is carry a better life around the world?"

Robert S. Harris

From now on, Continental Can Company, Inc. will be known as The Continental Group, Inc. It will consist of Continental Can Company, Continental Forest Industries, Continental Diversified Industries, Continental Canada and Continental Europe.

And what exactly are we about? We are primarily a packaging company. But what you may not realize is all that the word implies.

You see, a package, in all its variety, is a protector and preserver of virtually everything we use. And to fulfill these functions, we've long since gone beyond the metal container.

Continental Forest Industries produces a range of paper and paperboard products that in their various forms redefine the meaning of the word "package."

Continental Diversified Industries makes plastic bottles, sausage casings, and closures for bottles and jars among a broad range of other packaging-related products.

Continental Can Company produces the most basic packaging unit of all, the can, which carries countless essential foods and beverages countless miles to countless millions.

Continental Canada is a diversified manufacturer of everything from cans and cartons to automotive parts.

Continental Europe includes two of the leading packaging companies on the continent, Schmalbach-Lubeca GmbH, and Thomassen &

Drijver-Verblifa N.V., putting us in good position to participate in an expanding packaging market.

And, while we'll always remain a packaging company, we intend to pursue interests in other areas as well.

What we've become, then, is an international corporation that touches every corner of the globe, benefiting the lives of millions and producing packaging products that simply cannot be contained by our old name.

So, from Continental Can Company, Inc. we have become The Continental Group, Inc., the leading diversified packaging company in the world.

The Continental Group

Continental. Carrying a better life around the world.

President Says He Wants Price-Monitoring Agency To Look Into It

By EDWARD COWAN Special to The New York Times... WASHINGTON, April 27—President Ford said this morning that he "was disturbed" by an announced price increase for a major line of steel products.

Mr. Feibusch, who is in charge of public affairs, kept a determined silence on the merits of a 7.9-percent price rise for flat-rolled steel announced by the Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corporation to take effect June 1. By contrast, in 1974-75, the agency twice publicly challenged steel price increases.

Other Rises Watched Officials watched closely to see whether larger steel companies would match Wheeling's 8 percent rise for a product that accounts for about 45 percent of steel mill shipments and figures importantly in the manufacture of cars and appliances as well as countless tools, machines and other industrial products.

Marquette's Takeover Defenses

By ROBERT METZ

Management of the Marquette Company may have hit a snag in current efforts to reduce chances of a takeover.

The plaintiffs alleged that the management proposals would work to the detriment of shareholders since takeover offers, whether by merger or tender, are generally priced at substantially higher-than-market prices.

On Monday three common-stock holders of Marquette filed an action in the United States District Court in Delaware seeking an adjournment of the Nashville cement producer's annual meeting, scheduled for 11 A.M. today.

Marquette is selling at about $10 a share, although the company has a book value of $31 a share with cash equivalents of $7 a share.

The plaintiffs wanted shareholders to have more time to weigh the management plan.

Marquette is one of many companies attempting to change bylaws in favor of increasing the difficulty of being taken over.

Yesterday the court refused to delay the meeting, saying that the plaintiffs would not be irreparably damaged by its being held today.

Managements argue that it is difficult under severe circumstances to operate effectively because they must spend a lot of time attempting to ward off offers they reasonably believe to be against the best interests of the shareholders.

Plus, you will get a service even institutions don't get from your broker — a choice of either Third Market or Stock Exchange executions with Third Market executions confirmed immediately while you are on the telephone.

For its part, the Marquette management justifies its proposal on the ground that it must prevent hasty decisions by stockholders that they might later regret.

For complete information on our commissions and services, call us for our Information Package or send the coupon below.

On the other hand, Benjamin Graham, a successful professional investor who has written standard works on security analysis, believes that shareholders are far too sheeplike to accept management resolutions that tend to perpetuate management.

In the suit filed Monday, the plaintiffs charged that the proxy materials were defective, partly on technical grounds—the company did not advise shareholders of the revocability of their proxies as required by the Securities and Exchange Commission's proxy-solicitation rules.

In a speech to the Institute of Chartered Financial Analysts in September 1974, he said:

The plaintiffs in the suit wrote to management about this defect before filing, and the company has since made an attempt to correct it by sending mailgrams to shareholders informing them that their proxies are revocable.

Several managements have recently asked stockholders to vote charter changes that would make stock acquisitions more difficult to accomplish against their opposition — in other words, make it more difficult to deprive present officers of their jobs and more difficult for stockholders to obtain an attractive price for their shares.

Shareholders whose Marquette shares are held in street name (a broker's name instead of the investor's) appear likely to get word of the company's mailgram in time.

"If this movement becomes widespread, it could really harm investors' interests. I hope that financial analysts will form a sound judgment about what is involved here and do what they can to disengage stockholders from cutting their own throats in such a foolish and reckless fashion."

The plaintiffs argued in their suit that the company proxy materials were misleading since they did not stress that management would benefit from the amendments at the alleged expense of shareholders.

Shareholders who Marquette shares are held in street name (a broker's name instead of the investor's) appear likely to get word of the company's mailgram in time.

Meanwhile, trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange continued at a relatively subdued pace, compared with its average of 30 million shares daily in January and February. Turnover rose to 17.76 million shares from 15.52 million shares.

Dresser Industries, with headquarters in Dallas, makes oil and gas field equipment, computing gasoline pumps and general industrial products.

Corporate Reports Reflected Nationwide trading in all issues listed on the Big Board rose to 21.01 million shares from 17.91 million shares.

The price action of some stocks reflected corporate earnings reports. Fairchild Camera, for example, dropped 1 1/2 percent after showing sharply lower profits for its latest quarter.

Glimty Oil, on the other hand, climbed 2 1/2 to 157 on the strength of improved earnings. Similarly, Shell Oil rose 2 1/2 to 57 1/2.

Marathon, which had previously purchased 5,138,726 shares, now owns 96 percent of Pan Ocean. Marathon's tender offer for publicly owned shares at $18 each was made on April 2. It expired yesterday.

Polaroid, unchanged at 35 1/2, has sued Kodak on charges of patent infringement. The two companies are grinding for a fight in the instant photo field.

Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical moved ahead 3 1/2 to 33 3/4 after reporting higher quarterly profits.

DOW DIPS ON FEAR OF TIGHTER CREDIT

The Dow Jones Industrial Average has stretched across Wall Street. Activity in the money market by the nation's central bank following the third straight week of increases in key money-supply aggregates, suggests that the Fed could be tightening monetary policy slightly to dampen future gains in the rate of inflation.

Federal Reserve twice

out a quick recovery

signaled that the Federal Reserve

said that the Fed was "clearly" trying noted that the Fed had raised the

Auto Company Leaders Vie in Optimistic Forecasts

Auto company chairman seem to have found a new field of competition in toppling themselves and each other with almost-weekly optimistic forecasts of new car sales for both 1976 and 1977.
Auto company chairman
Murphy, chairman of the General Motors Corporation, forecast 1976 sales of "at least" 10.5 million cars. This was up a notch from an earlier forecast in which he predicted sales this year including imports, of 10.25 million cars.
Mr. Murphy started this week with an even rosier
forecast — total cars sales this year of 10.8 million — and added that there was a good chance that 1977 sales would top the 1973 record of 11.4 million units.
Mr. Murphy is now well ahead of Henry Ford 2d, chairman of the Ford Motor Company, whose last forecast, on March 31, was for sales of 10.2 million this year. This was a substantial increase from his earlier 1976 sales estimate of from 9.8 million to 9.8 million.

John J. Horan, who has been president of Merck & Company since 1975, yesterday was elected to the additional positions of chairman and chief executive officer.
Mr. Horan, who is 55 years of age, succeeds Henry W.
Gadsden as chairman and chief executive. Mr. Gadsden, who has reached the mandatory retirement age of 65, will remain a member of the board of Merck.
A graduate of Manhattan

College and the Columbia Law School, Mr. Horan joined Merck's legal department in 1953. He became director of corporate planning in 1962, a senior vice president in 1972 and executive vice president in 1974. He became president, chief operating officer and director of Merck in January 1975.
Mr. Gadsden's retirement marks the end of a 39-year career with the company. He has been chief executive officer since 1965 and chairman since 1971.
Peter R. Kesten, professor of international finance at Princeton University, said yesterday that American companies were unlikely to suffer any retaliation if they defied the Arab boycott against companies doing business with Israel.

He noted that the United States and the Netherlands, which were "the special targets of the 1973 Arab oil embargo because of their pro-Israel stance," had increased their exports to the Middle East in 1974 and 1975.
"France, its pro-Arab policies notwithstanding, has fallen behind," he added.
Professor Kesten urged resistance to the Arab boycott at a news conference held by the American Jewish Committee at the group's headquarters, 185 East 56th Street.
The Arab states, he asserted, apparently were prepared to overlook or evade their own boycott rules when they needed American goods.

A. H. ROBINS CO. TELLS OF PAYMENT ABROAD

RICHMOND, April 27 (AP)—
The president of A. H. Robins Company, a Richmond-based pharmaceutical concern, said today that the company had made questionable foreign payments totaling $130,000.
The company president, William L. Zimmer 3d, told a meeting of Robins stockholders that the payments were made over three years in a foreign country that he declined to name.
None of the payments, Mr.
Zimmer said, "represented political contributions" and none was made to obtain business from the foreign government or concerns involved.
The payments, he said, were made "to assure that legitimately obtained orders would be processed without the inordinate delay customary to that particular country and to insure that orders, once processed, would be properly and promptly distributed to the hospitals and clinics placing the orders."

Computer Seen as Life Buoy in Legal 'Sea of Paper'

By ROBERT M. SMITH
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, April 27—
A Government antitrust official suggested today that the answer to the "snow job," the "blitz" and the "counter-attack"—all techniques he said were used by antitrust defendants—may lie in the use of computers.

here, reflected the conference's topic, "The Computer Framework for Complex Litigation."
The "snow job," Mr. Wilson explained, involves defendants who say: "All right, government here are the documents. Millions and millions and millions of them."
The "counterattack" involves asking the Government for every document in its files. "This," Mr. Wilson said, "should keep at least 17 Government counsel busy over a period of years and divert them from other and more productive things."

said, is a simple tactic, used by defense lawyers: "Depose everything in sight and everything that moves."
Mr. Wilson summed up the basic strategy of antitrust defendants this way: "If you have lots of paper available already, dump it all on opposing counsel. If you don't, but he does, demand he search for and produce it. Finally, if neither of you has enough paper, manufacture it in the form of thousands of pages of deposition transcript, interrogatory, answers and the like."

such a strategy, the official said, is probably to "go out and get a computer and an efficient input staff."
Mr. Wilson said that lawyers were lagging behind other people in the use of computer technology. "Perhaps," he suggested, "we are traditionally and fearful of abandoning tried and true ways."
In the end, Mr. Wilson said, "the computer and the lawyer will have to get to know each other pretty well because they are going to be in the same business for a long time."

Business Briefs

Lira and Dollar Gain in Europe
SELS, April 27 (UPI)—The British pound and the dollar firmed slightly on European money markets as the dollar recouped yesterday's marginal losses in the stronger Continental currencies. The pound gained its first gain in days against the dollar, rising slightly to close at $1.8175 to open at $1.8260, then slightly to close at $1.82375. The lira advanced with it to equal to 889.70 lire, compared with the day's 893.
 The dollar, which had declined on the Continent yesterday following the disclosure of an increased United States trade deficit for March, reversed its downward trend in Frankfurt it advanced from 2,5380 marks to 2,5273 francs to 2,5278, in Paris 6635 francs to 4,6675, and in Amsterdam from guilders to 2,6895. The dollar declined in Brussels, 0,085 francs to 40.02. The price of gold rose, in to $128.65 an ounce, up from yesterday's $127.35 London to $129 an ounce from $128.

C. Files Complaint on Airline Guide
ASHINGTON, April 27 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission has charged the Reuben H. Donnelly Corporation with straining airline competition by giving very little air to small carriers in its North American edition of its Airline Guide. The complaint, announced today, at the guide was a monopoly of the publication of schedules and that Donnelly had unlawfully refused to connect flights of commuter airlines in it. Moreover, the F.T.C. alleged that Donnelly had published direct flight schedules of both commuter and mainline airlines "in such a manner as may cause them to be looked in favor of certified carriers"—the larger airlines regulated by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Under the relief, Donnelly would be required to publish the schedules for all airlines "on a nondiscriminatory basis." Donnelly is a subsidiary of Dun & Bradstreet Companies of New York City.

Exports First North Sea Oil
ONDON, April 27 (UPI)—Britain exported its first North Sea oil today, sending 350,000 barrels to Germany as part of a program expected to earn $100 million over the next two months. The Greek-owned Ghionia was en route from British Petroleum's field in Hamburg with the shipment of crude oil worth $1.7 million.
 Energy Secretary Anthony Wedgwood Benn said that the Netherlands and France would be receiving oil between now and late June—a total of 2.5 million barrels from the Forties field.

"Here are the facts you should know about Puerto Rico's higher productivity, lower wages and tax-free profits"

Teodoro Moscoso, Administrator of the Economic Development Administration of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, describes some of the major reasons behind Puerto Rico's record of consistently higher profits for manufacturers.

Read what he has to say about what this most profitable of U.S. plant sites can mean to your bottom line, then send in the coupon below for more information.

Teodoro Moscoso is Administrator of Puerto Rico's Economic Development Administration. Businessman, diplomat and government planner, he was the "father" of this U.S. island's remarkable self-help program, "Operation Bootstrap," in the mid-40's. He served as U.S. Ambassador to Venezuela under President John F. Kennedy, was the first Coordinator of the Alliance for Progress, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Banco de Ponce, and until 1973 he was Chairman of the Board of the Commonwealth Oil Refining Company.

There is no mystery about the steady influx of U.S. manufacturers to Puerto Rico over the last 25 years. Operation Bootstrap, our economic self-help program, has always operated on the principle that business will go where the profits are.

Let me tell you about three major factors that continue to attract billions of dollars in manufacturing investment to Puerto Rico—total tax exemption, higher worker productivity and lower labor costs.

1. Total Tax Exemption

One result of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico's unique compact of permanent union with the United States is that U.S. Federal taxes on corporate income do not apply in Puerto Rico. This makes Puerto Rico the only location under the U.S. flag where corporate profits are completely free of U.S. Federal income taxes.

In addition, the Commonwealth has passed laws of its own which give your plant in Puerto Rico 100% exemption from corporate income taxes, real or personal property taxes and municipal license fees.

This exemption from Puerto Rican taxes is extended over periods of from 10 to 30 years, depending on the location of your plant on the island.

How about repatriation of profits to the U.S. mainland? If you set up your Puerto Rican operation under Section 931 of the Internal Revenue Code, you may repatriate all of your profits completely free of U.S. or Commonwealth taxes.

With unemployment in Puerto Rico now exceeding 20%, we need the jobs you can provide. To get those jobs, we have made certain that in Puerto Rico the profit you make is the profit you keep—all of it.

2. Higher Worker Productivity

Manufacturers, both U.S. and foreign, have repeatedly expressed their admiration for the skill and dedication of their workers in Puerto Rico. These qualities have meant higher manufacturing output and increased profits.

The level of worker productivity in Puerto Rico is among the highest in the world. The latest U.S. Census of Manufacturers found that a worker in Puerto Rico returns an average $4.03 in value for every dollar of wages earned. This is well above the U.S. average of $3.36 and puts Puerto Rico among the top U.S. plant sites in labor productivity—and as the accompanying chart shows, ahead of most leading industrial states.

3. Lower Labor Costs

Although the Fair Labor Standards Act covers Puerto Rico, industrial wages on the island are much closer to the statutory minimum than any other plant site in the United States.

With a plant on the U.S. mainland, you have to contend with an average hourly wage of $5.02. In Puerto Rico, the average is $2.69—and that includes sick leave, vacation, and paid holidays. Why not join manufacturers in your

Housing Slide Damages Hopes for 'Industrialized' Construction

ALAN S. OSER
 To have all the building boom? They had such a boom. There was the rise in the house market, the Rouse system, the Camac system, the Descon-Concord system, the Shelley system, the F.C.E.-Dillon system, the system, and more.

The industrialized housing methods, mostly used in Europe, to improve construction quality and possibilities, too. They were the future during the construction boom, but many people saw the wave of it. Some are still asking an officer, C. V. Blakelee & Sons yesterday.

"It's sound proof, it's fireproof, it's fast forever," Blakelee's New Haven plant made the precast and prestressed concrete components for Rutland Road, a 438-unit, award-winning urban development corporation project at Rutland Road and East 92d Street in Brooklyn. It was finished last year.

But there isn't enough multifamily housing production in the region now to support Blakelee's modern precast concrete operation in New Haven, probably the largest in the New York region. It is phasing out of operation. Blakelee is a subsidiary of Westinghouse Electric, and the New Haven plant, vastly modernized for production of the Bison system in 1971, is part of Westinghouse's prestressed concrete division. Other plants in the division—in Illinois, California, Florida and Alabama—will remain open. And so will other Blakelee operations.

"But someone will take our place," said the Blakelee official of the plant closing. "It's just a case of when."

Five years ago hopes were high that multifamily housing could be built in sufficiently high and steady volume to use industrialized techniques and bring the benefits of mass-production methods into housing. Quality would improve, and production time might be cut by perhaps a third, reducing "brick and mortar" costs, about 10 percent. Some estimates were even higher.

The Operation Breakthrough program, spearheaded by George Romney when he was Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, was to provide a Government-subsidized stimulus to the industrialized approach. It did. Some of the systems still in use were winners of contracts for Breakthrough demonstration projects in Jersey City. The completed products of three of the systems—the Camac, now known as the Starrett system, and the Descon-Concord and Shelley systems—stand off Journal Square in Jersey City.

But multifamily housing has not been supported at a level sufficient to support operations by all or even most of the industrialized systems. They seem to require a consistency, smoothness and high level of market demand to take greatest economic advantage of mass-production techniques.

At Starrett Housing Corporation, the largest user of industrialized housing in the metropolitan area, there is also a conviction that for most efficient use industrialized methods should work as part of a vertically integrated housing operation. Starrett has an industrialized housing plant that is used in some though not all of its building projects.

In the Operation Breakthrough program there was a "Phase 3" stage under which successful producers were awarded a "set-aside" that comes to about 1,700 units of housing, and these Starrett has been able to keep building even after the 1973 freeze in Federal interest-subsidy funds.

An example of a structural wall panel made by the Starrett Housing Corporation's industrial housing division.

POLICE CRITICIZED FOR JAIL SUICIDE

Inefficiency and Insufficient Training Are Charged

Special to The New York Times
YONKERS, N. Y., April 27—The jail suicide of 20-year-old Steven Karagianis was the result of inefficiency by the Westchester County Sheriff's Department and insufficient training of Yonkers Police Department employees, according to a report released today by Yonkers Corporation Counsel Eugene Fox.

These factors were among the "unusual occurrences" that set the stage for the inmate's death on April 7, the report said.

Mr. Karagianis was found dead in his jail cell one and a half hours after he was arrested by Yonkers policemen in a warrant that had been executed three months earlier. Mr. Fox's conclusions were reached after studying an investigation made by the internal affairs division of the Police Department, he said. They were expressed in a memorandum prepared by Vincent Castaldo, the City Manager. Mr. Castaldo said today that he would issue his own report later in the week.

According to Mr. Fox, "There is no evidence that the death was caused by any means other than suicide." Since Mr. Karagianis was under 21 years of age, he was placed alone in jail with a warrant for older prisoners, which gave him the opportunity to take his life, the report said.

The warrant for Mr. Karagianis' arrest as a probation violator had been canceled on state and Federal computers, but a civilian employee of the Police Department "erred in misreading" a computer printout on his legal status after his arrest, the report said.

But, Mr. Fox contended, the conduct of this civilian employee was "beyond reproach" and so member of the uniformed police force "acted other than in a proper manner."

The Sheriff's Department, the report said, should have specifically notified the Yonkers Police Department of the canceled warrant or should have physically retrieved it.

The inmate's father, John Karagianis, said today that his son had an attorney, Jeremiah Guttman, had informed the Police Department soon after the arrest that the warrant was invalid.

"Why didn't they call and verify this?" he asked, adding that "it's their responsibility or not following through."

The Yonkers Police Department "is trying to pass the buck to the county," Muriel Karagianis, the inmate's mother, asserted.

In concluding his report, Mr. Fox suggested that a new system of warrant cancellation be devised and that the computer system be reviewed. He also urged that all communications division personnel in the Police Department be trained to interpret computer information.

Urban League, Eying Boston Violence, Reconsiders Having Convention There

By PAUL DELANEY
Special to The New York Times

BOSTON, April 27—The National Urban League, in light of continuing racial hostility here, is reconsidering holding its annual convention in Boston in July.

Vernon E. Jordan Jr., executive director, said the "decision of whether to come to Boston will be made by the board of trustees at its meeting next month."

"The board will weigh very carefully whether to bring the convention and 10,000 people to Boston. We have been asked not to come by the Boston Urban League and by two local organizations," he remarked in a telephone interview from New York, adding:

"But my personal view is we have an obligation to come to Boston. We can't stay away because black people are being beaten. That happens in every city."

Nevertheless, there has been growing pressure on national officials to move the meeting. A spot check of several league offices found some directors, here and people like to champion the underdog.

"And there's a relationship between effort and motion. Like when it's going uphill it sounds like this—ra-ra-ra. It's working hard. But downhill it goes ding-ding-ding. You see, it's happy."

Sometimes at night Mr. Crapo confided, members slip into the museum to take off the motor hatch covers of the trolley cars and listen to the roar of the gears and motors.

Asked why he liked trolley cars, Mr. Crapo said: "They were given such a short shrift in history. It's like fighting for a cause. You've got a struggle."

Bechtel Defends Its Role In Arabs' Boycott of Israel

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27 (AP)—Bechtel Corporation, the heavy construction contractor, has formally denied that it violated Federal antitrust laws by taking part in the Arab boycott of Israel.

The company filed a response in United States District Court yesterday to a suit by the Justice Department accusing Bechtel of refusing to deal with blacklisted persons as subcontractors for projects in Arab countries.

Bechtel said United States laws expressly sanctioned conduct of business in countries that prohibited import of certain items through boycott. It also said the Justice Department admitted that antitrust laws never had been applied to boycotts for political objectives.

No trial date has been set in the Government's suit.

PROSECUTION RESTS IN GOV. MOORE TRIAL

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 27 (UPI) — The Government, after presenting testimony that Gov. Arch A. Moore was "sympathetic" to a bank charter for a bank with ties to a financially troubled loan company, rested its case in Federal Court today.

The testimony came from the State Banking Commissioner, George Jordan, an unindicted accused co-conspirator. However, Mr. Jordan said Governor Moore did not influence his favorable vote on the charter requested by the Center Bank and Trust Company in 1972.

"I had no conversations with Governor Moore in regard to this other than a passing remark on the telephone," Mr. Jordan testified in the seventh day of the trial. "He did express to me that he was sympathetic to the proposed applicants to the charter."

However, on cross-examination from Stanley Preiser, a defense attorney, Mr. Jordan said Mr. Moore did not try to influence his vote or attempt to apply pressure for a rehearing when the charter was rejected.

Mr. Moore, 53 years old, and William Loy, 44, his former top assistant, are on trial on charges of extorting $25,000 from the now bankrupt diversified Mountaineer Corporation in exchange for a banking charter that was never received.

This is one of ten million birds killed with the chemical Tergitol this year and last. Tergitol strips oil from the feathers. The birds die of shock and freezing to death. A slow, painful death. State governments with the help of the federal government plan to kill many more millions of birds with Tergitol.

The current "kill list" includes Red-Winged Blackbirds, Grackles, Starlings, and Cowbirds. Who will be next? The birds are called a problem because they form large roosts. To some people killing is easier than finding out why. But in the end killing is no solution.

Tergitol is a chemical manufactured by Union Carbide. Our appeals to Union Carbide to stop making Tergitol available for bird-killing were refused.

Who are we? We're Society for Animal Rights, Inc. We spent a large amount of our limited funds fighting in Federal court to save the birds. We saved many. But the battle is by no means won. The governments in their bird-killing plans and Union Carbide as the manufacturer of the killing agent are big, powerful and rich. We're not.

The birds need your help. To help them, so do we. Tell Union Carbide you're boycotting their products until they stop selling Tergitol for bird-killing. Use the coupon at left below. Tell us you are with us. The coupon at the right will do that.

NEW YORK APPLAUDS RICHARD RODGERS' NEW HIT MUSICAL "REX" BASED ON THE COLORFUL LIFE AND LOVES OF HENRY VIII

"'REX' IS A GLORIOUS MUSICAL AND NICOL WILLIAMSON HAS NEVER BEEN BETTER."

—Kevin Sanders, WABC-TV

"'REX' IS A HANDSOME-LOOKING SHOW. THE BRILLIANT NICOL WILLIAMSON IS MAGNIFICENT IN HENRY'S RAGE AT HIS DAUGHTER ELIZABETH, THE QUEEN TO BE, AND IN HIS THRONE-ROOM MUSICAL SOLILOQUY THAT FOLLOWS. MISS FULLER IS EXTREMELY ATTRACTIVE AND POSSESSES THE METTLE AS AN ACTRESS TO STAND UP TO WILLIAMSON'S HENRY."

—Douglas Watt, N.Y. News

"MR. RODGERS HAS PROVIDED HIS FINEST SCORE SINCE 'NO STRINGS.' JOHN CONKLIN'S SETTINGS ARE SIMPLY GORGEOUS. THEY MAKE THE SHOW LOOK EXQUISITE."

—Martin Gottfried, N.Y. Post

"'REX,' A WITTY EYE-APPEALING PAGEANT WITH THE JOYFUL PRESENCE OF NICOL WILLIAMSON. A LIVELY, COLORFUL ENTERTAINMENT. JOHN CONKLIN'S SCENERY AND COSTUMES ARE MAGNIFICENT, MAKING THE PLAY THAT MUCH MORE A TREASURE. PENNY FULLER IS UTTERLY CHARMING. 'REX' IS AN UNFORGETTABLE MUSICAL PORTRAIT OF A MONUMENTAL MONARCH MADE MEMORABLE BY THE PRESENCE OF THE INCREDIBLE NICOL WILLIAMSON. WHY, HE CAN EVEN SING! IF I WERE YOU, I'D GO OVER TO THE LUNT-FONTANNE THEATRE AND SPEND TWO CHARMING HOURS WITH 'REX' AND NICOL. SUCH VERY GOOD COMPANY!"

—William Reidy, Newhouse Newspapers

"TO SAY I LIKE IT WOULD BE THE UNDERSTATEMENT OF THE YEAR. I HAVE ONLY ONE COMPLAINT: IT ONLY LASTED 2½ HOURS. HERE IS A SHOW WITH MELODY, DRAMA, COMEDY, WIT, TENDERNESS, BEAUTY, PASSION, SPECTACLE AND ENTERTAINMENT SUCH AS WE HAVE NOT HAD IN MANY MONTHS. I CAN HARDLY WAIT TO SEE IT AGAIN!"

—George Oppenheimer, Newsday

"THE NEW RICHARD RODGERS MUSICAL HAS GOT A LOT GOING FOR IT. A NEW LUSH SCORE BY RICHARD RODGERS (HIS FIRST FOR SIX YEARS), MAGNIFICENT COSTUMES, MAJESTIC SETS AND, OF COURSE, AS ITS CENTRAL CHARACTER, THE MOST SCANDALOUS FIGURE IN ENGLISH HISTORY, HENRY VIII, PLAYED BY ONE OF THE WORLD'S FINEST ACTORS, NICOL WILLIAMSON. IT IS A GLORIOUS MUSICAL BY ANY MEASURE AND NICOL WILLIAMSON HAS NEVER BEEN BETTER."

—Kevin Sanders, WABC-TV

"RICHARD RODGERS IS A MUSICAL GENIUS. SHELDON HARNICK A LYRICIST OF GREAT SENSITIVITY AND NICOL WILLIAMSON ONE OF THE FINEST ACTORS TODAY. AS PLAYED BY NICOL WILLIAMSON HENRY IS A WITTY, LIFE-EMBRACING MONARCH. TO LOOK AT 'REX' IS BETTER THAN BEING AT THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY. TO WATCH NICOL WILLIAMSON IS AN OCCASION IN ITSELF."

—Pat Collins, WCBS-TV

"RICHARD RODGERS IS BROADWAY'S MR. MUST-MAN. LYRICIST SHELDON HARNICK AND RICHARD RODGERS ARE A PERFECT TEAM. THEIR MUSIC FLOWS FROM THE ACTION. THE TUNES ARE DELIGHTFUL. NICOL WILLIAMSON HAS TAKEN ALL THE FAKE POSTURING AND FALSE RHETORIC OUT OF THE ROLE, AND MADE THE KING A LIVING MAN. 'REX' HAS MOMENTS OF RARE MAGIC."

—Emory Lewis, Bergen Record

"YOU CAN'T HELP LEAVING 'REX' HUMMING SEVERAL OF RICHARD RODGERS' BEAUTIFUL SONGS. A BEAUTIFUL AND DRAMATICALLY KNOWING SCORE IT HAS TWO SONGS WORTHY OF INCLUSION IN THE CANON OF RODGERS CLASSICS: 'AWAY FROM YOU' AND 'AS ONCE I LOVED YOU.' NICOL WILLIAMSON AS HENRY VIII BRINGS A VITAL PRESENCE AND A SOLID VOICE TO THE STAGE. PENNY FULLER IS TREMENDOUSLY APPEALING. TOM ALDREDGE IS SUPERB AS THE FOOL. JOHN CONKLIN'S SETS AND COSTUMES ARE REGAL AND OPULENT, AND AT THEIR WITTIEST AND MOST IMAGINATIVE IN A SPLENDID MASQUE IN THE SECOND ACT. DANIA KRUPSKA HAS CHOREOGRAPHED THE MUSICAL NUMBERS INVENTIVELY—PARTICULARLY AN 'ALLEGORIC' CHASE SONG AND A LIVELY SWORD DANCE. THE PRODUCTION MOVES SMOOTHLY, BUILDING TO A STRIKING FINAL CURTAIN IN WHICH WE SEE HENRY ON HIS BIER AND ELIZABETH ON THE THRONE."

—Howard Kissel, Women's Wear Daily

"WILLIAMSON IS A MASTERFUL ACTOR. PENNY FULLER TRIUMPHS. SHE IS POSITIVELY RADIANT, SHINING AND VALIANT."

—Rex Reed, N.Y. News

"AS HENRY, THAT MARVELOUS ACTOR NICOL WILLIAMSON IS EVERY INCH THE KING. 'REX' HAS OPULENT SETS AND RICH COSTUMES."

—Stewart Klein, WNEW-TV
